in which the powers of government were confided to a president & an assembly general, composed of a legislative chamber (59 deputies), in which the metropolitan archbishop, the members of the courts of supreme justice, & the council of state, have a voice in the deliberations. The president is elected for four years.

GUATEMALA LA ANTIGUA, or OLD GUATEMALA, lies 24 m. W.S.W. of the newer capital, at the foot of the Volcan d'Agua, by an eruption of which it was overwhelmed in 1541. It was again devastated by an earthquake in 1773, but has been since rebuilt, & is stated to have a pop. of 12,000 persons. Many of its old public buildings remain entire, comprising a fine cathedral & a palace. Around it are many sugar establishments, & its exports of cochineal amounted in value to about $30,000 annually.

GUATEMALA (SANTIGO DE), or New Guatemala, city & cap. Republic of Guatemala, Cent. Amer. In lat. 14° 36′ N., lon., 90° 13′ W. Pop. 35,000 to 40,000. It is finely situated at the extremity of a plain 20 m. in length by 6 m. in breadth, with a deep ravine on three sides. It lies 4,372 feet above the sea, is in the form of a quadrangle measuring about 1 m. each way; the streets are wide, straight, cross each other at right angles, are clean, well paved, & many have flagged footpaths. The houses are only one story in height, (on account of the frequent earthquakes,) with small grated windows. The city is amply supplied with water, of excellent quality, brought by means of an aqueduct from a distance of 12 m. The plaza, or market place in the centre, is a square of 150 yards on each side, on one of which is the cathedral & archbishop's palace, on the opposite the government house and some of the law courts; on the third are the guard-house, barrack, & some shops; on the fourth, a corridor full of shops, where the principal part of the business of the city is done: & in the centre is an ornamental fountain. There are several other squares, each with its central fountain. The churches, 24 in number, are some of them good massive buildings; the cathedral is a neat, substantial structure, with a handsome façade, and a well-proportioned, chaste interior. Other public buildings are the University of San Carlos, the Tridentine College, the hospital of San Juan, outside the city, near the cemetery, four public lavaderos or washing places, a circus for bull fights, &c., & a slaughter house. At the S. end of the city a fort, mounting about 20 guns, has been erected, but more for the purpose of overawing the inhabitants than of defence, for it is commanded by a height at no great distance. There are several private schools, and four or five printing offices; & 2 weekly newspapers are published, & 3 almanacs issued. Provisions, vegetables, fruits, & all ordinary articles of consumption, are abundant & moderate. The inhabitants are represented as courteous, affable, & hospitable to strangers, but are not much given to visiting each other. They have little desire for amusements of any kind, almost their only recreation being their religious processions, which are frequent. On these occasions the streets through which the processions pass are adorned with arches, & decorated with evergreens & flowers. The buildings of the present city were commenced in the year 1776, three years after the earthquake of 1773, which nearly destroyed old Guatemala, the former capital.

GUERNSEY, county, O. Situated in the E. part of the state, and contains 676 sq. ms. Named from the island of Guernsey, near the coast of France, from which a considerable number of its early settlers came. The surface is hilly; soil moderately good. Watered by Wills cr. & its branches. Grapes from which wine is made, have been successfully cultivated on the sides of its hills, which also afford good pasturage. Capital, Cambridge. There were in 1850, live stock valued at $660,821; wheat, 217,275 bush. produced; Ind. corn, 682,757; oats, 301,964; wool, 178,267 pounds; salt, 10,500 bush. manufactured in 2 establishments employing a capital of $3,500;—17 flouring & grist m., 17 saw m., 2 iron foundries, 2 woollen fac.; 9 tanneries, 20 persons employed; 2 printing offices, 2 weekly newspapers pub. Cap. emp'd in manufac., $98,687; value of manufac. articles, $251,175;—77 churches; 2 libraries, 1,548 vols.; 1 college, 40 students; 1 acad., 20 pupils; 130 sch., 8,135 scholars. Pop. 1840, 27,748; 1850, 30,438.

GUERNSEY, the second in size of the Channel, or Anglo-Norman Islands, in the Bay of St. Michael, 30 m. W. the coast of Normandy, & 51 m. S. of Portland, English coast, & 15 m. W.N.W. Jersey. Area, 16,000 ac. Pop. 1851, 36,645. Inhab. houses, 5,318. Its form is triangular, & its coast-line, of about 30 m. in circumference, is deeply indented with bays, and surrounded by sunken rocks. Surface gently varied, but generally sloping from the S.—where the cliffs are lofty—to the N. coast, which is low. It is well watered. Soil rests on a structure almost everywhere granitic, & is, with the aid of sea-weed manure, rendered very fertile. Climate, moist, but healthy, & so mild, that oranges, melons, figs, myrtles, & the Guernsey lily, flourish luxuriantly. Wood is not plentiful, fences are commonly of stone or turf; & in the N. are many tracts of heath. Farms average from 5 to 12 ac., the land being greatly subdivided under the law which gives to each son an equal share in his father's landed property. Rents vary from 10s. to 10l. an ac. Chief crops are vegetables, wheat, barley, & apples for cider. The orchards likewise furnish pasture for the famous breed of cows, which are larger & more valued than even those of Alderney, & yield, on an average, 1 lb. per day, throughout the year, of the finest butter. Large hogs are numerous. Manufactures are of no importance. Trade, or rather smuggling, has greatly declined since 1807, when the exports from these islands were made subject to our general revenue laws. The shipping, which in 1839, comprised about 100 vessels, averaging 100 tons each, was mostly employed in importing British manufs., & in exporting cider, potatoes, cattle, & granite. They also carry S. American produce to the Mediterranean, in exchange for wine, which is again exchanged in Hamburg for corn. Duties are very moderate, & provisions extremely cheap. Steamers ply between Guernsey & London, Southampton, Plymouth, & Weymouth. The isl. is divided into 10 pas., forming a deanery of the church of England, in diocese of Winchester. St. Peter's, on the S.E coast, is the only town in the island, which is mostly studded with scattered houses or cottages, embosomed in orchards. The natives of the lower orders speak the old Norman French; they have long been remarkable for their adherence to Protestantism. The isl. is under a lieut.-gov., who represents the sovereign in the assembly of the states, a parliamentary body composed of 12 jurats, with 8 rectors & 2 constables of each pa., & 132 douzaniers from the whole island. These have the power, with the sanction of the crown, of making laws & imposing taxes. The latter are very moderate, producing an annual rev. of about 10,000l. The royal court has jurisdiction over all the Channel Isls., except Jersey. Guernsey formed a part of the duchy granted by Charles the Simple to the Norman Rollo, to whose descendants it has now belonged for nearly 1,000 years. The French have made many vain attempts to capture it. It is defended by strong fortifications, & has a well-organized militia.

GUIANA, GUYANA, or GUAYANA, a wide region of S. America, comprising all of that continent between the Amazon & Orinoco rivers, extending from lat. 3° 30′ S. to 8° 40′ N., & lon. 50° to 68° W., & subdivided into Brazilian (formerly Portuguese), British, Dutch, French, & Venezuelan (formerly Spanish) Guiana; it was discovered near the end of the 15th century. The Dutch formed the first settlement in 1590, near Demerara r.; the English, in 1596, near Berbice and Surinam. In 1667 the English settlements were given up to the Dutch, but again re-occupied by the English; & in 1814 the settlements between the Corentyn & Marony rivs. were restored to the Dutch. —I. (Brazilian Guiana) comprises the N. part of the Brazilian dom. between lat. 3° 30′ S. & 4° 20′ N., & lon. 50° 68° W., bounded N. by the Sierras Imaguaca, Pacaraima, & Acarai, which separate it from the other divisions of Guiana, W. & S. by the Rio Negro & Amazon rivers, & having E. the Atlantic. Area roughly estimated at 433,000 sq. miles. It is traversed by the Rio Branco, and numerous other rs.; is mostly covered by a dense vegetation; peopled chiefly by roving Indian tribes, & divided between the provs. Para & Rio Negro, which last territory, however, can scarcely be considered as actually under Brazilian rule.—II. (British Guiana), a colonial territory on the N.E. coast of S. America, belonging to Great Britain, & generally considered to extend from the Atlantic between lat. 6° & 8° 40′ N., as far southward as lat. 0° 40′ N., & from the 57th to the 61st degree of W. lon., having E. Dutch, S. Brazilian, & W. Venezuelan Guiana, & comprising an area of 76,000 sq. ms.; but the possession of much of this has been disputed by Brazil & Venezuela. The European pop. are mostly descendants of the Dutch settlers. The African negroes are more numerous than the Europeans. The amount of the native tribes unknown. Pop. of the settled portion 1851, 127,095. Surface near the ocean a rich alluvial flat, & extending in mud banks into the sea. This plain extends inland from 10 to 40 m.; it then ascends by successive terraces to the Sierras Pacaraima & Acarai, on the S.W. & S. frontiers; near the W. boundary Mount Roraima rises to an elevation of 7,500 ft. Principal rivers, the Essequibo, Demerara, Berbice, & Corentyn, the last forming its E. border. There are two rainy seasons on the coast; the great from December to February, followed by a lesser till April, when the great rains prevail again from May till the end of July. In the interior there is only one rainy season, from April till the middle of August. Temperature ranges from 75 to 90 deg.; mean temp. of the year 81° Fahr. Prevailing wind, N.E.; changes in rainy season to W. The vegetation is perhaps the most luxuriant of any on the surface of the globe. Principal products are at present sugar, along the coast, & which has progressively superseded there the culture of cotton & coffee, though the latter is still extensively grown on the uplands; rice, maize, wheat, cacao, vanilla, tobacco, and cinnamon, are also raised. In 1852, 836,900 cwt. of sugar were exported (being a greater amount than from any other British colony); molasses, rum, coffee, cotton, rice. Total value of exports about $12,000,000, & imports $8,000,000. Government vested in a governor, council, & the orders of the sovereign in council; the laws of Holland are those mostly in force. Salary of Governor & Commander-in-Chief, £5,000. It is the see of a bishop. The colony is divided into the cos. Demerara, Berbice, & Essequibo; chief towns, George Town, the cap., & New Amsterdam.—III. (Dutch Guiana, or Surinam), a colonial territory, N.E. coast of S. America, belonging to the Netherlands, between lat. 1° 55′ & 6° N., & lon. 53° 50′ & 57° 30′ W., having E. French, W. English, & S. Brazilian Guiana. Area, 10,[illegible] sq. ms. Pop. in 1849, 64,270; Indians unknown. Natural features are like those of British Guiana. Principal rivers, the Surinam in its centre, Marony on the E., & Corentyn on the W. frontier. There are many Jews in this country, & the runaway negroes, or Maroons, have formed a colony in the interior. About 25 million lbs. of sugar & 4 million lbs. of coffee are stated to be exported annually; cotton, cacao, rice, cassava, & yams, are raised; & other products are fine woods, gums, drugs, & timber, yet the colony is reported not to be flourishing. Imports come chiefly from Holland, though there is some traffic with the W. India Islands, & a large smuggling trade with Colombia. Government vested in a governor-general & a high council. Chief town, Paramaribo; principal port, Amsterdam, with a pop. of about 5,000.—IV. (French Guiana), forms the E.most colonial subdivision of Guiana, between lat. 2° & 6° N., & lon. 51° 30′ & 54° 30′ W., having E. & S. Brazil, W. Dutch Guiana, & N.E. the Atlantic. Area, 10,980 sq. ms.; & pop. in 1841, 22,01[illegible]. Surface rises progressively on proceeding inland, & the middle region of the colony is from 1,000 to 2,000 ft. above the sea. Rivers very numerous, & the coast lands appear to be less unhealthy than in British Guiana. Cultivated lands are estimated to occupy 1-80th part of the whole. Products comprise sugar, cotton, the cultivation of which is considerable, cocoa, cloves, annatto, vanilla, pepper, cinnamon, nutmegs, dyewoods, manioc, rice, maize, & bananas. Value of exports, 2,800,000 fr. annually. Government vested in a governor, privy council, & colonial council. French Guiana is divided into the districts Cayenne & Sinnamary. Chief town, Cayenne, the cap.; the rest are insignificant.—V. (Venezuelan, or Columbian Guiana), the S.W. subdivision of Guiana, comprising most of the country between lat. 2° & 8° 40′ N., & lon. 60° & 68° W., or more than half of the Venezuelan dominions, having S. the Sierras Pacaraima & Iraguaca separating it from Brazil, W. & N. the Orinoco, N.E. the Atlantic, & E. British Guiana, the mutual boundary being disputed. Area roughly estimated at 188,500 sq. ms. Pop. according to Codazzi, 20,000, of whom 16,000 are roving Indians. It forms most part of the dep. Orinoco. Principal towns, Angostura, Piedra, & San Fernando de Apure.

GUINEA, a geographical division of W. Africa, comprising the coast of the Atlantic Ocean, from Cape Negro, lat. 15° 41′ S., to Cape Verga, lat. 10° 20′ N. It is divided into Upper or N. Guinea, & Lower or S. Guinea; N. Guinea extending from lat. 10° 20′ N. to lat. 1° S., and between lon. 14° 30′ W., and 10° E., is bounded by Senegambia & Soudan on the N. & N.E., the Atlantic on the W. & S.W., & S. Guinea on the S.E. The coasts are in general low, humid, & unhealthy, but very fertile. The Kong mountains, of which but little is known, are believed to extend from E. to W. along the N. boundary. Principal rivers, the Niger or Quorra, the delta of which is on the Calabar coast, the Volta & Assinie. The S. & W. coasts are watered by numerous small streams. The chief products of the country consist in gold dust, indigo, pepper, cotton, & the sugar cane. The forests contain vast numbers of elephants, lions, tigers, rhinoceroses, and enormous serpents. The coasts from N. to S. are called Liberia, Grain coast, Ivory coast, Gold coast, Slave coast, & the Calabar coast. The interior is divided into numerous native states, the chief of which are the kingdoms of Ashantee, Dahomey, & Benin. Feticism is the prevailing superstition. The principal European settlements are Accra, Cape Coast Castle, Dixcove, Elmina, & Sierra Leone. On the S.W. coast is the Republic of Liberia. S. Guinea extends from lat. 1° to lat. 15° 41′ S., & lon. 8° 50′ to 18° (?) E. It is bounded on the E. by elevated mountains, covered with forests. The chief rivers are the Zaire & Coanza, the sources of which are unknown. The W. plains are watered by numerous small rivers. The mountains are said to contain iron & copper. Vegetation is rich, & wild animals are numerous, comprising the lion, elephant, giraffe, antelope, zebra, monkey, the hippopotamus, crocodiles, & serpents. The principal states of S. Guinea are Loango, Congo, Angola, & Benguela. This country was discovered by the Portuguese in 1487, & they have retained nominal possession of the S. districts. Their chief foreign trade is in the supply of slaves for Brazil.

HALIFAX, a city, & seaport cap. of co. & province of Nova Scotia. Situated on a declivity near the coast, & the centre of the peninsula, & on the W. side of a deep inlet of the sea, called Halifax harbor, which extends several miles inland; lat. 44° 39′ 42″ N., lon. 63° 35′ 30″ W. Including its suburbs it is 2¼ long, and about ¼ m. wide. Pop. 1852, 26,000; 1854, 30,000. The streets are spacious, & cross each other at right angles. Many of the houses are of wood, plastered & stuccoed, but many, also, are handsomely built of stone. There are 19 churches,—3 Baptist, 1 Congregational, 2 Episcopal, 4 Methodist, 1 Mormon, 4 Presbyterian, 2 Roman Catholic, 1 Sandemanian, 1 Universalist. The public edifices are substantial stone structures, the principal of which is the province building, containing the chief government offices, the public library, &c. It is built of freestone, & is a fine edifice. There are a court house, Dalhousie college, Free Church college, National school, an academy, military hospital, workhouse, prison, exchange, 2 banks, a savings institution, 3 insurance offices, assembly rooms, theatre, 2 libraries, a mechanics' institute, several public schools, &c. The dock-yard covering 14 ac., is one of the finest in the British colonies. The harbor in front of the town, where ships usually anchor, is 1 mile broad; further up the inlet expands into a wide basin, called Bedford basin, comprising an area of 10 sq. m., and capable of accommodating the whole British navy. Along the waters edge, in front of the town, are numerous wharfs, close to which ships can lie for the discharge of their cargoes, & above these are the warehouses. Halifax is the principal naval station for the British N. American colonies, & is defended by strong forts & batteries. There are owned in Halifax about 100 large square-rigged vessels, as many schooners, & numerous small craft. It exports consist of dried & pickled fish, lumber, coals, corn, flour, cattle, butter, cheese, whale and seal oil, furs, &c., valued ann. at $1,500,000. Imports, the native produce of the W. Indies & United States & British manufactured goods, &c., to the value of $3,700,000 annually. There are some manufactures of snuff, leather, paper, & soap; also breweries, distilleries, & a considerable fishery. It has steam communition with New York, Boston, & with Liverpool, weekly in summer, & semi-monthly in winter; & also with the W. Indies. A railroad is in progress, & is expected soon to be completed, which will greatly facilitate travel & transportation with Canada & the United States. There is a canal connecting it with the navigation of the Bay of Fundy. The city is divided into 6 wards, & is governed by a Mayor, city council, & a board of 18 aldermen.

HALIFAX, a parl. bor., large manufacturing town, & township of England, co. York, W. Riding, on the navigable Calder, & on the Manchester & Leeds r. r., 14 m. W.S.W. Leeds. Area of pa., which is one of the largest & most populous in England, 75,740 ac. Pop. of do. 149,257; do. of parl. bor. 1851, 33,582. It is picturesquely situated on a declivity, surrounded by lofty heights, & with the exception of a few ancient streets, is mostly built of stone, well paved & lighted. Chief buildings, the piece-hall, a vast & handsome stone built quadrangle, containing 315 rooms or warehouses in which the manufacturers keep their cloths for sale, & the pa. church, a fine structure of the 15th cent., & 12 other churches,—1 Baptist, 5 Episcopal & 6 Methodist. Here are also numerous Dissenters' meeting-houses & schools, several of which, in the rural parts of the pa., are well endowed; a blue coat hospital, founded in 1642, a handsome modern infirmary, a jail belonging to the Duke of Leeds as lord of the manor; a theatre, assembly rooms, public baths, library, literary society's hall with library & museum, mechanics' institute, & several banks. The woollen manuf. was introduced here early in the 15th century, the abundance of water power being probably the great attraction. Since the use of steam, these manufs. have immensely increased, coal also being plentiful in the pa., & the river Calder forming a means of communication with Hull on the one side, & Liverpool on the other. The principal staples are shalloons, camlets, figured vestings, moreens, bombazeens, crapes, russets, serges, baizes, coatings, broad & narrow cloths, kerseys, cottons, & silks. In 1838, there were in the pa. 80 worsted, 63 woollen, 71 cotton, & 7 silk mills, employing together 13,579 hands, independent of cottage-weavers. Most of the goods are sold in an unfinished state, to the merchants, in the piece-hall, on Saturday, which is market day. Halifax comprises 19 townships, & is governed by the co. magistrates, who hold petty sessions weekly. It sent two members to H. of C. during the commonwealth, which privilege was restored by the Reform act. The manor was remarkable in the middle ages for its strict laws against thieves, & for its exercising the power of jurisdiction in capital cases so late as the middle of the 17th century. Outside the town, on the W., is Gibbet hill, where those convicted of theft, to the amount of 13½d., were executed by a machine, which was the prototype of the French guillotine. Archbishop Tillotson was born in this pa., A. D. 1630.

HAMPTON ROADS, Va., a branch of Chesapeake bay, at the mouth of James r., between Old Point Comfort on the N., & Willoughby point on the S. It is sufficiently deep for the largest ships of war, & is an important naval station. On Old Point Comfort, there have been ceded to the United States 250 acres; & on the point, a fortification, called Fort Monroe, which mounts 385 guns, generally 32 & 48 pounders, 130 of which are under bomb proof covers. On the opposite point, 1 m. distant, is Fort Calhoun. The foundation is made by throwing in stones, & it covers about 7 acres. This fort is designed to mount 265 guns, 24's, & 32's, & nearly all under cover. These completely command the entrance to Hampton roads. On the N. side of the entrance is Old Point Comfort Light, lat. 37° 6′, lon. 76° 18′ W. shows a fixed light on a white tower, & is elevated 40 feet above the surface of the sea. On the S. side of entrance the Willoughby Spit Light Vessel shows fixed lights, elevated, the one 32, and the other 41 feet, above the sea level; and here is a fog bell also. The channel leading from the Capes of Virginia to Hampton Roads is reduced at Old Point Comfort to a very narrow width. The shoal water, under the action of the sea & the reaction of the bar, is kept in an unremitting ripple; which circumstance has given to this place the name of the Rip Raps.

Surface flat in the N., forming part of the great plain of Germany; & mntnous. in the S., where it is covered by offsets of the Harz, highest point, the Königsberg, 3,260 feet in elevation. The coasts are under the level of the sea, from the encroachments of which they are protected by dykes. Hanover is watered by 3 of the chief rivs. of Germany; 1, the Elbe, with its affls. the Oste, Ilmenau, & Jetze; 2, the Weser, affls. the Wümme, Leine, Aller, Ocker, Innerste, & Hunte; 3, Ems, affls. the Haase & the Vechte, which flow to the Zuyder Zee. On the N. are extn. marshes & numerous lakes; the mntnous. part is rich in metals. Climate humid, mild in the N., & cold in the S. Mean temp. 48°.6; extremes, 64°.6 to 3°.2 Fahr. Soil generally poor, is most fertile in Bremen & L. Friesland, near the coast. Chief products, barley & oats, potatoes, rye, & vegetables, tobacco, hops, chicory, flax, & hemp. There are extensive forests of firs in the Harz, & of oak & beech at Solling. Cattle form one of the chief riches of the country, & they are an important article of Export. The horses of E. Friesland, which are celebrated, are bred for exportn., & there is a gov. stud at Celle. The sheep are of improved breeds, & geese are extensively reared in the polders; bees yield valuable produce in Meppen, Luneburg, & Verden. The lakes & rivers abound in fish. Mining is the most important branch of industry, the chief products are the metals of the Harz, including iron, copper, lead, litharge, salt, turf, coal, alum, marble & granite. There are several mineral springs, some of which have estabs. of baths. The princip. manuf. is that of linen, the chief seat of which is at Osnabruck, & hempen & woollen fabrics. The manuf. of cotton is limited in extent, & of recent introduction. Paper, soap, leather, & hats are among the other manufs. Brewing & the manuf. of metals are important branches of industry. Although advantageously situated on the N. Sea, & traversed by navigable rivs., the commerce of Hanover is not extensive. It is conducted mostly by the towns of Bremen & Hamburg. Emden is the chief port. Princip. exports, linens, yarns, & agricultural produce. Imports comprise manuf. goods, colonial produce, wine, and spirits. Besides the navigable rivs., Hanover is traversed by excellent roads, & railroads connect the cap. with Hamburg in the N., Brunswick in the E., & Hildesheim in the S. The pop. in the S. belong to the Saxon race, & in the N.W. to the Frisons. In 1852, there were 1,494,033 Lutherans; 92,220 Calvinists; 217,367 Roman Catholics, and 1,071 Christians, and 11,562 Jews. Public instruction is placed under the direction of a superior council; there were in 1845, 3,561 primary schools, numerous industrial & secondary, polytechic & elementary schools, 17 gymnasia, & 13 progymnasia. The national seat of learning is the university of Göttingen. There is a school of mines & forestry at Klausthal: milit. & veterinary schools, schools of midwifery, & 5 normal schools. At the dissolution of the French empire, Hanover having reverted to its former sovereigns, the French system of administration was abolished, & the old régime re-established. In 1818, the prov. states voted a constitution, modelled on those of Engl. & France, & in 1833 a new constitution was promulgated. In 1838, Ernest D. of Cumb., having been called to the throne, on the death of king William IV. of Engl., in virtue of the salique law, abrog. the new constitution, re-established that of 1819, & convoked a new parliament. In consequence of the revolutionary movements of 1848-9, several important modifications in the gov. have taken place. Public. rev. 1853, estimated at 8,005,099 thalers; expenditures, 8,332,718 thalers, leaving a deficiency of 327,619 thalers. Public debt, Jan. 1, 1853, 36,522,887 thalers. HARTFORD, city, capital of Hartford co., Ct., & the semi-capital of the state, situated on the right b. of the Connecticut river, 50 m. from its mouth, at the head of sloop navigation; & on the New Haven, Hartford & Springfield r. r., lat. 41° 45′ N., & lon. 72° 40′ 45″ W. from Greenwich, & 4° 15′ E. lon. from Washington. It is 34 m. N.N.E. from New Haven; 44 N.W. from New London; 70 W. from Providence; 100 W.S.W. from Boston; 97 S.E. from Albany; & 123 N.E. from New York; 336 W. The population in 1810, was 3,955; in 1820, 4,726; in 1830, 7,076; in 1840, 9,468; 1850, 17,966.

The compact part of the city is more than a mile in length, & three-fourths of a mile wide. The ground rises gradually from the river, & on the W. & S. becomes considerably elevated. The streets are not laid out with great regularity. Main street, which passes through the place in a N. & S. direction, about 60 rods from the river, is broad, & well built; & Little river, which crosses the S. part of the city from west to east, is crossed in this street by a stone bridge, 100 feet wide, consisting of a single arch of 104 feet span, over thirty feet above the bed of the river. Many of the streets have fine houses in pleasant locations. Little river furnishes, in the city, some valuable water power. Hartford is well situated to become a considerable commercial capital. Connecticut river, which has been made navigable for boats, 220 miles, to the mouth of Wells river, in Newbury, Vt., opens an extensive country to it at the north. A covered bridge, 1,000 ft. long, & which cost about $100,000, connects the city with East Hartford. A line of steamboats connects the city with New York.

Among the public buildings & institutions, is the state house, a spacious & handsome edifice, fronting on Main street. The legislature now meets here, on each alternate year, the odd years at Hartford. The city hall is a large & commodious building of the Doric order of architecture. Trinity college has an elevated & commanding position in the western part of the city, has 3 edifices, was founded by the name of Washington college in 1824, has a president, & 12 other professors or instructors, has had 300 alumni, has 80 students, & 15,000 vols. in its libraries; its philosophical apparatus is quite complete, a cabinet of minerals & a botanical garden are connected with the institution. It is under the direction of the Episcopalians. The commencement is on the last Thursday in July. The American Asylum, for the instruction of the deaf and dumb, was the first establishment of the kind in the United States, & has prepared teachers for other similar institutions. The Rev. Thomas H. Gallaudet, its first principal, visited Europe, & particularly France, to obtain the requisite information, & was eminently successful. In addition to funds granted by the state, & by individuals, the United States granted a township of land, in Alabama, consisting of upwards of 23,000 acres, which constitutes a permanent fund, & enables the institution to afford instruction on very favorable terms. It has a large & commodious building, in a commanding situation, the W. part of the city, surrounded by 8 or 10 acres of land belong to the establishment. It has, usually, about 140 pupils. The Retreat for the Insane, is on a commanding eminence, a mile & a quarter S. from the state house, & was opened in April, 1824. It has a spacious & fine stone edifice, covered with cement, & with the surrounding grounds, has a handsome appearance. It is well conducted, & is one of the best institutions of the kind in the United States. The Wadworth Athenæum is an elegant edifice of the Gothic order of architecture, built of granite, occupied by the rooms of the Young Men's Institute, lecture-rooms, & library of about 10,000 vols., a room used as a gallery for exhibiting paintings, & one occupied by the Connecticut Historical Society, which has a large collection of antiquities, manuscripts, &c., & about 5,000 vols. of printed books. There are in the city 23 churches,—3 Baptist, 6 Congregational, 3 Episcopal, 1 Jews Synagogue, 4 Methodist, 1 Roman Catholic, 1 Second Advent, 1 Unitarian, 1 Universalist, —an arsenal, a museum, several markets, 8 banks, aggregate capital $5,047,700, 2 banks for savings, ten insurance companies, several very extensive manufac. establishments, among which are 4 carpet fac., 2 piano forte fac., 3 machine shops, a plough fac., 2 rifle fac., hardware, hats, sev. extensive book printers, & binderies, &c., &c., emp. a cap. of about $4,000,000; 10 printing offices issuing 2 daily, 8 weekly, 2 monthly publications. The city is divided into 6 wards, & is governed by a mayor, 6 aldermen, & 24 common councilmen.

The Indian name of Hartford was Suckiag. In 1633 a company of Dutch traders came to Hartford, & built a house at the mouth of Little r., which they called the House of Good Hope, & erected a small fort, in which they planted 2 cannon; they opposed the first English settlement, but at length relinquished their claim.

Hartford was first permanently settled in 1635, by the Rev. Mr. Hooker & a party of emigrants, who travelled through the wilderness, with their cattle, from Newtown, (now Cambridge,) Mass., subsisting chiefly on the milk of their cows. It was incorporated as a city in 1784. The Charter Oak, in the trunk of which the charter was concealed in 1686, is still vigorous, and is one of the lions of Hartford.

HAVRE (LE), or HAVRE DE GRACE, a comm. & fortified seaport town of France, dep. Seine-Inf., cap. arrond., on the N. bank of the estuary of the Seine, at its mouth, in the English Channel, & at the terminus of the railr. from Paris to Rouen, 105 m. N.W. Paris, & 44 m. W. Rouen. Lat. 49° 29′ 16″ N., lon. 0° 6′ 9″ E. Pop. 1851, 28,954. It is situated on a plain around its port, & is well built. It has a comm. college, a tribunal of commerce, & its port is, next to Marseille, the most important in France. Its citadel is surrounded by a triple row of ramparts & fosses, which renders it a fortress of the first class. The harbor, which is the best & most accessible on this part of the French coast, consists of 3 basins, separated from each other, & from the outer port, by 4 locks, & capable of accommodating about 450 ships. A large body of water being retained by a sluice, & discharged at ebb-tide, clears the entrance to the harbor. Cape de la Hève, forming the northern extremity of the same, lies N.N.W. from Havre about 2¼ m. It is elevated 250 feet above the sea, & surmounted by two lighthouses, 50 feet high; these, which are 325 feet apart, exhibit powerful fixed lights. There is also a brilliant harbor light at the entrance of the port, on the extremity of the western jetty. Havre has two roadsteads, viz., an inner & outer one; they are separated by the sandbank called Leclat, between which & the bank Le Hautes de la Rade is the N.W. passage to the port. The Hoc, or southern passage lies between the last-mentioned bank & that of Amfar. In the great road there is from 6 to 7 fathoms of water at ebb-tide, & in the little, from 3 to 3¼ fathoms. Large ships always lie in the former. The rise of the tide is from 22 to 27 feet. Extensive works for the improvement of the harb. are now in the course of construction. The most remarkable buildings are the arsenal, custom-house, tobacco factory, new theatre, & two light-hos. on Cap de la Hève. Elegant villas cover the slopes of Ingouville, which may be considered as a suburb of the town. The commerce of Havre, which may be regarded as the port of Paris, is connected with all parts of the world, but especially with the United States & N. Europe. There belonged to the port in 1851, 368 sailing vessels, agg. burden 71,963 tons; 32 steamers, burden 4,259 tons. Customs duties received for the year 1851, 26,164,000 fr. Numerous steam-packets ply regularly between Havre & the ports of France, England, Russia, & New York, U. S. A. Havre was founded by Louis XII. in 1509. It was held by the English in 1562, & bombarded by them in 1678 & 1759. Birth-place of Madame de La Fayette, Bernardin de St. Pierre, & Casimir Delavigne.—II. a vill. of Belgium, prov. Hainaut, 4 m. HAYTI, or HAITI, Island of (Carib, "the Mountainous Country.") Spanish San Domingo, originally Espanola, W. Indies, C. A. It is next to Cuba, the largest, richest, & most beautiful of the Antilles. It lies S.E. from Cuba, & separated from it by the windward passage, 50 m. broad. Jamaica and Porto Rico lie W. & E. of it, but at considerable distance. It extends from Cape Engaño, lat. 18° 35′ N., lon. 68° 20′ W., to Cape Tiburon, lat. 18° 22′ N., lon. 74° 28′ W.; & from Point Beata, lat. 17° 36′ 42″ N., lon. 71° 32′ W., to Cape Isabella, lat. 19° 59′ N., lon. 70° 1′ W., & is about 400 m. long E. to W., & 150 wide, at its broadest part. Area, including the islands of Tortuga, Gonaive, & its dependencies, 27,690 sq. m. The E. part of the island is occupied by the republic of Dominica, & the W. part by the empire of Hayti.

The island is of irregular form, deeply indented by bays & inlets, & has many prominent projections; the latter, its S.W. portion, forms a headland about 150 m. long, & 18 to 40 m. broad. It is intersected W. to E. by three mountain ranges, all connected by transverse ridges. Between these ranges are extensive plains & savannahs. The principal range traverses the island centrally, & rising from which are formed the culminating points of the system; of these, Cibao, 7,200 feet above the sea, is the loftiest; this range commences W. at Cape Nicolas, takes an E.S.E. direction, and terminates at Cape Engaño. Nearly parallel with this is the ridge commencing W. near Monte Christi, borders the N. coast till it terminates E. abruptly on approaching the so-called peninsula of Samana; it is followed by low marshy grounds, interlaced by estuaries and channels, which separate Samana from the mainland, & afford communication from the bight of that name to the sea on the N. shore of the island; the heights, however, re-appear on the opposite side of the low grounds, & terminate in Cape Samana. Between these ranges extends La Vega Real, or the royal valley, 130 m. long, drained by the Yacki & Yuma rivers, and present an immense expanse of pasture lands. The third and S. mountain range commences at Cape Tiburon, on the W. and extends E. along the whole S. headland, and terminates at the river Nëiva, about 80 m. W. the town of San Domingo. Besides La Vega Real, there are other extensive plains & valleys, more particularly on the E. coast of San Domingo, los llanos, or the flats, 80 m. long, a rich pasture district. The plain of Cayes, at the W. end of the island, has been greatly increased in extent by the formation of a kind of rock, consisting of minute fragments of shells & coral, incrusted with calcareous cement resembling travertin. Fragments of vases, & other human works, have been found in it a depth of 20 feet. This kind of rock is now in process of formation throughout the whole of the W. Indies. All the streams of Hayti of any importance originate in the great central mountain ranges, &, as may be inferred from the general direction of the high lands, have either an E., W., or S. course,—no stream of any consequence flowing N. The principal streams are, Artibonite, flowing W.; & Monti Christi, or N. Yacki, N.W.; the Yuma, flowing S.E.; & the Nëiva or S. Yacki, the Nisao, & the Ozama, flowing S. They are encumbered at their mouth with sand bars, & hence few of them are navigable, even for short distances. The Ozama, however, admits vessels drawing 12 or 12½ feet. There are several lakes, mostly in the S.W. of the island. The chief are the salt lakes of Enriquille & Azucy, the former in the valley of the Nëiva, about 20 m. long by 8 m. broad, the latter 10 m. W. of Lake Enriquille, about 10 m. long by 6 m. broad. S. of these lies the fresh lake Ycotea, or Limon, about the size of lake Azucy. Mineral springs exist in various parts; the most noted, in the E. portion of the island, are those of Banica, temperature 112° to 125°; Biahama, Yaya, & Pargatal; & in the W. portion those of St. Rose, containing iron, vitriol, & alum; the saline waters of Jean Rabel, and those of Dalmarie, containing sulphur, potash, &c. The mineral products are various and rich, including gold, platina, silver, quicksilver, copper, iron (from which is made a superior quality of metal), magnetic iron, tin, sulphur, manganese, antimony, rock salt, bitumen, jasper, marble, opal, lazulite, chalcedony, &c. The gold mines are abandoned, & gold washing is only carried on by the poorer classes in the N. rivers. Indeed, all mining operations are neglected from want of management and capital.

Hayti is one of the healthiest of the W. Indian

Islands, & this more especially may be said of its northern portions & more elevated localities. The Vega Real is famed for its salubrity. The seasons are wet, during which heavy rains are frequent, three & even five inches at times falling in 24 hours; and a dry, during which little or no rain falls, and in some localities years have passed over without a single heavy shower. At San Domingo the mean temperature is 78° 5′, & the extreme 60° & 95°, while at Port au Prince the range is from 63° 5′ to 104°. The minimum occurs in December, & the maximum in August and September. Land breezes moderate the summer heats. Hurricanes occur less often than in the Windward or Carribbean Islands. Earthquakes, though not frequent, have been very disastrous; the most notable recorded are those of 1564, 1684, 1691, 1751, 1770, and 1842. By that of 1751, Port au Prince was destroyed, & 60 m. of coast submerged; & by that of 1842 towns were overturned, & thousands of lives lost. Tropical vegetation is seen to its greatest advantage in Hayti; contributing, with the lofty, rugged mountains & deep valleys, to render the scenery unsurpassed. Columbus & followers, when they came in sight of La Vega Real, supposed they had reached an earthly paradise. Majestic pines, noble mahogany trees, fustic, satin wood, & lignum vitæ, grow on the mountains, & form the principal exports of the S. provinces. The roble or oak (Catalpha longissima), which yields hard durable wood; the wax palm, divi-divi (Cæsalpina cariaria), numerous fine cabinet woods, & the richest flowering plants abound; & the usual tropical vegetables, plantains, bananas, yams, batatas; & fruits, oranges, pine apples, cherimogas, sapodillas, with melons & grapes, yield a plentiful return. The staple cultivated products are coffee, sugar, indigo, cotton, tobacco, cacao, the quantity of which raised, has fallen off in consequence of the unsettled state of the island. The W., or French section, has always been the best cultivated. The native quadrupeds of Hayti are small, the largest not bigger than a rabbit; but the animals introduced from Europe, & now in a wild state, have extensively multiplied. Large numbers of cattle & hogs roam over the plains, or find shelter in the mountain forests. Birds are neither numerous in species nor beautiful in appearance; still great numbers of pigeons, (Columba leucocephala,) are annually taken & used as food; & ducks, in large quantities, & other swimmers & waders, frequent the marshy places. Insects are numerous. The lakes and rivers contains numbers of caymans & alligators, and in the surrounding seas whales are common in spring, and green & hawksbill turtles, lobsters, & crabs abound on the coasts.

When the Spaniards discovered the island, under Columbus, in 1492, they found it inhabited by a happy, docile, indigenous race, subject to five hereditary chiefs, named caeques, who reigned over as many districts—that which included the La Vega Real being the most important. So ruthlessly were these poor aborigines dealt with by the Spaniards, that in 1507 they were reduced to 60,000, & in 1535 there remained only 500. The pure race died wholly out the latter end of last century; but their characteristic features and luxuriant hair, are still to be traced among their descendants, from intercourse with Europeans, Africans, & colored people. These are still called Indios. The aborigines believed in a Supreme Being, whom they did not adore; paying their tribute to inferior deities, called Zemes, whom they dreaded, & whom they represented by figures carved in wood or stone, or manufactured of clay or cotton. They believed in the immortality of the soul, & thought in the future state to meet their friends in an earthly paradise. A number of Indian antiquities are still met with, consisting of figures, mortars, daggers, stools, &c., carved in wood or shaped in clay. Broken pottery is often found; & recently a granitic ring, 2,270 feet in circuit, was discovered in the interior, near San Juan, where in former times resided the redoubted chief, Caonabo. A cemetery, with numerous graves, and several limestone caves & grottoes, with picture writings traced upon the rocks, have been met with in various quarters, some of them very elaborately executed. The W. end of the island is now inhabited by an African race, & the E. by a race of Spanish descent, intermingled with numerous negroes & colored people.

The principal towns in Hayti are Cape Haytien, Gonaives, & Port au Prince, in the W.; San Domingo & Savana la Mar in the E.; & Monte Christi & Santiago in the N. The value of the commerce of the United States with the island for the year ending 30th Jun., 1852, was:—Imports into the United States, value of, $1,870,627; exports from United States, domestic produce & manufactures, $1,479,326; foreign produce & manufactures, $239,577—$1,718,903. Total value of commerce, $3,595,530.

HAYTI (EMPIRE OF), an independent state, occupying the W. end of island of same name, & corresponding with the portion of the island formerly belonging to the French, & including the adjacent islands of Tortuga, Gonaives, &c., cap. Port au Prince. The E. boundary, towards the Dominican Republic, is formed by an irregular line, drawn S. to N. from the river Anses a Pitre, or Pedernales, on the S. coast, about lon. 71° 50′ to the mouth of the river Massacre, which flows into the bay of Mazanilla, about 10 m. S.W. Cape Haytien. Area, 10,081 sq. m. Pop. 700,000, females greatly predominating in number. It is divided into six departments, subdivided into arrondissements & communes. The country, as seen by the preceding article, is mountainous, interspersed with rich fertile plains & valleys, well watered, & yields, spontaneously, numerous valuable products, more especially fine timber of various kinds, & dye woods. Agriculture, however, on which it must greatly depend for prosperity, is in a very indifferent state, & is prosecuted with no degree of vigor, the generality of the rural inhabitants living, from day to day, on the spontaneous productions of the soil. The productions are sugar, indigo, tobacco, cochineal, cacao, fustic, logwood, mahogany, castor oil, beeswax, &c. The annual value of exports amount to 25,000,000 francs, equal to about $5,000,000. The revenue from customs & other sources amounted in 1850, to 4,249,940 francs. During the period from 1846 to 1849, the expenses amounted 5,421,420 francs, and the receipts to 4,623,880 francs.

By the constitution of 1843, the sovereign power was recognized to be in the people; the executive power was placed in the hands of a president; the legislative in a chamber of commons, & a senate—the former consisting of one or more representatives from each commune, elected for three years, & the latter of six for each department, elected for four years, & both uniting on certain occasions, to form the National Assembly. The judicial power was placed in a court of cassation, being the high tribunal of appeal, with various & subsidiary, & initiatory courts. The laws are based on the code civil of France. The whole patronage, civil and military, being in the hands of the president. Soliloque dispensed it in such a manner as enabled him, in 1849, to have his title of president changed into that of emperor, & to have the constitution altered to suit the circumstances. Princes of the blood, dukes, counts, barons, & 2 orders of knighthood—that of St. Faustin, & a legion of honor, were created. The effective force of the army, is stated to be 40,000 men, and that of the navy, 15 small vessels, formerly merchantmen, & 1,000 men.

The people are nearly wholly of the negro race, speak the French language, & profess the Roman Catholic religion, other forms of religion, however, being tolerated. Few foreigners reside in Hayti, still those who do so are well protected. They cannot hold real property, except in the name of a Haytien, with whom they associate for that purpose, & in whose name it is registered. Principal towns, Port au Prince, the capital, Cape Haytien, Gonaives, &c.

The Republic of Dominica occupies a portion of the island formerly belonging to Spain. It was united with the French portion in 1820, & formed the Republic of Hayti, & continued such until the 27th February, 1844, when Dominica became a separate republic under the presidency of Pedro Santana. He was succeeded by Bonaventure Bacz, in 1849. Area estimated at 1,800 sq. m. Pop. 200,000, composed of Spaniards, creoles, & blacks. Capital, San Domingo.

HEBRIDES, or WESTERN ISLANDS. Ebudæ, a series of islands, off the W. coasts of Scotland, betw. lat. 55° 45′ & 58° 34′ N., & lon. 5° & 8° W., & consisting of two principal groups; the Outer Hebrides,—Lewis, Harris, N. & S. Uist, Benbecula, Barra, and numerous smaller islands in the cos. Ross & Inverness; & the Inner Hebrides.—Skye, Rum, Eig, Canna, Coll, Tiree, Mull, Iona, Colonsay, Jura, Arran, Bute, &c., partly separated from the former by the channel termed the Little Minch, & lying more immediately off the shores of Inverness & Argyle, in which cos. & in Buteshire they are included. Total number, not including the smaller islets, 160, 70 of which are permanently inhab. Total area has been estim. about 3,000 sq. m. Pop. probably 115,000. Of 1,592,000 ac. of surface, mains., morasses, lakes, & unproductive soil have been computed to occupy 840,000 ac., pasture 700,000 do., & arable land only 180,000. Geologically the Hebrides are divided into several groups.—The Gneiss Isls. comprehend the whole of the outer Hebrides, Lewis, Harris, N. & S. Uist, Tiree, Col, Iona &c.—The Trap Isls. are Skye, Rum, Eig, Canna, Mull, Ulva, Staffa, & St. Kilda.—The Slate Isls. are Islay, Jura, Gigha, Colonsay, &c.—The Chalk Isls., consisting of trap, sandstone, & limestone, are Bute, Arran, Cumbrays, & Ailsa. Climate moist & chill in Outer Hebrides, much rain in winter, but little snow. Soil of the Gneiss Isls. poor & often peat moss; the trap & sandstone isls. more fertile. Pop. for the most part Celtic. They are generally in the greatest poverty, 4-5ths subsisting almost wholly on potatoes & fish. Principal proprietors are Campbell of Islay, Lord Macdonald, the Duke of Hamilton, Mr. Stewart Mackenzie, Mr. Matheson, Macleod of Macleod, the Marquis of Bute, & Maclean of Coll; & on the estates of the three former especially, in the isls. Islay, Colonsay, Skye, & Mull, as also in Buteshire, large farms, with improvements in agriculture have been introduced, & the pop. is in a better condition. The Lewis has also undergone great improvements under the proprietorship of Mr. Matheson. The introduction of steam navigation has also contributed very much to the improvement of the Inner Hebrides. The herring fishery, formerly an important resource of the people, has greatly declined, as has the manuf. of kelp, of which, during the war, nearly 4,000 tons were produced, bringing sometimes 20*l.* per ton. Other manufacs. are insignificant & wholly domestic, except some production of cotton stuffs at Rothesay, distilling in Islay, & boat-building at Tobermory, Stornoway, and some other places. The rearing of cattle & sheep is the most profitable branch of industry, & the stock of each is estimated at 120,000. Live stock, including ponies, kelp, wool, coal, ling, herrings, limestone, and slate, are the chief exports; imports are iron, groceries, salt, oatmeal, & in some of the isls. peat coal. A few years ago, the Hebrides had 6 branch banks, but no printing press or newspaper, & "the greater number of the isls. are destitute of surgeons, or even of inns." They are divided into 28 quoad civilia pas. In the Outer Hebrides especially, most of the inhabs. are Roman Catholics. Principal vills., Stornoway in Lewis Portree in Skye, Torosay in Mull, & several in Islay & Buteshire. These isls. were ruled mostly by sovereigns of Norwegian descent from the 9th century till 1264, when they were annexed to the crown of Scotland. The principal islands are noticed under their respective names.

HEBRIDES (NEW), an isl. group, Pacific O., betw. lat. 14° & 20° S., & lon. 168° & 170° E., & E.ward of New Caledonia & the Mallicollo group. Princip. isls. comprise Ambrym, Annaton, Erromango, Tanna, and Aurora. The natives are of the Papua race.

A ditch, mound, & bastioned wall, enclose an oblong area 1 m. in length, entered by five gates, the interior divided by four arched bazaars, meeting in a domed quadrangle in the centre of the city. Herat has been stated to contain 4,000 dwelling-houses, 1,200 shops, 17 caravanserais, 20 public baths, some fine reservoirs, & numerous mosques, the principal of which is a large structure of the 13th century. On the N. side of the city is a strong citadel; & without the walls are some magnificent ruins of a religious edifice, and an enormous mound raised by Nadir Shah. The chief's residence is a mean building, & the filth of the town is extreme; but the vicinity is very beautiful, and irrigated by numerous canals, & highly productive, and Herat has been usually one of the most flourishing places in the East, as a grand central mart for the products of India, China, Tartary, Afghanistan, & Persia; & other manufs. of carpets, sheep-skin, caps & cloaks, shoes, &c., are carried on. Most of its wealthy merchants are Hindoos. Herat was long the cap. of the extensive empire ruled by the descendants of Timour. Its territory now extends N. to the Moorhaub mountains, and E. nearly to Candahar; & it is still a post of great military as well as commercial importance.

Amongst the charities, for the number of which Hereford is famous, are 11 ancient hospitals, or alms-houses, yielding together about 1,500*l.* per ann. Total charities, 2,960*l.*, besides 4,360 loaves distributed by the dean & chapter. The other public structures are the handsome county hall, the county jail, & house of correction, ancient town-hall, city jail, theatre, of which the Kemble family long had the management; a handsome Roman Catholic chapel, a large infirmary, supported by voluntary contributions, a lunatic hospital, union work-house, market-house, bank, & Nelson monument; ruins of a monastery of Black friars, and some remains of the castle & city walls. Hereford has small manufs. of gloves, hats, flannels, & cutlery; an increasing trade in cider, hops, corn, wool, bark, and timber, which will be much facilitated by the Hereford & Gloucester canal, the navigation of the river being dependent on season, &c. Coals are obtained chiefly from Abergavenny by r. r.; & several railroads to connect the city with Shrewsbury, Worcester, Gloucester, & Monmouth, are projected, or in progress. Markets well supplied with fish, on Wednesday & Saturday. The October fair is the largest in England for cattle & cheese. Races in August. The city is a polling-place, & the chief place of election for the county; it has sent 2 members to the House of Commons since 23d Edward I. The diocese is one of the most ancient in England, being of British origin, & re-established by the Saxons in 680. It comprises the 2 archdeaneries of Hereford & Salop, including 13 deaneries, which partly extend into the counties of Monmouth, Radnor, Montgomery & Worcester. Among the celebrated bishops of this see were—Thos. Cantilupe, who died in 1825, & was canonised, Fox, the Reformer, Godwin, & Dr. Headley. Hereford suffered much from the Welsh, during the Saxon era, from the Barons' wars, under the Plantagenets, & from those of the 17th century, when it warmly espoused the side of the king, & was one of the last places which held out against the parliament. During the middle ages it gave title of earl to the great house of Bohun, & now gives that of Viscount to the Devereux family. The city is celebrated in historic records as having been the birth-place of Nell Gwynn and David Garrick, and the school in which the genius of Clive, Siddons, and Kemble, was fostered & developed.

HEREFORDSHIRE, an inland co. of England, having N. co. Salop, E. Worcester, S. Gloucester & Monmouth, & W. the Welsh cos. Brecon & Radnor. Area, 836 sq. ms., or 534,823 ac., of which 470,400 are grass & arable. Inhab. houses 1851, 23,890. Pop. 115,489. Surface beautifully undulating, & richly varied with woods, orchards, hop grounds, & meadows, possessing scenery which has been called the garden of England. Principal hills, the Hatterel range of the black mntns. in the S.W., & the Malvern on the E. Chief rivs., the Wye, Lugg, Arrow, Frome, & Munnow. Soil in most parts, a deep heavy red loam, mixed with marl and chalk, & unusually fertile. Climate remarkably healthy—diseases of the respiratory organs are placed second in the list of mortality, but instances of longevity are more numerous than in any other part of England, except the N. Riding of the co. of York. Chief agric. produce, wheat & barley, apples, pears & hops, all of superior quality. The apple crop is the largest in England, estimated to yield not less than 20,000 hdds. of cider, mostly of superior quality. About 13,000 ac. are devoted to hops. Oak bark is also an important production. The cattle are generally preferred for feeding to any other English breed, but are not good milkers. Nearly half the field labor of the co. is performed by them. The breed of sheep (estimated at about 500,000), is almost as celebrated as that of the cattle. Agriculture pretty well advanced, but there is still a great want of drainage. Estates of all sizes; farms mostly large, & held at will. There are small manufs. of gloves, & coarse woollens. Hereford is divided into 11 hunds., & 221 pas., in dioceses of Hereford, & of St. David's, & in the Oxford circ. Endowed charities, 13,153*l.* Chief towns, Hereford, Leominster, Weobley, Ross, & Bromyard. It sends 7 members to H. of C., 3 of which are for the co. Hereford formed a part of the anc. British Siluria, & was one of the last provinces which submitted to the Saxons, under whom it formed a part of Mercia. Numerous ruined castles testify its former military importance as a border county.

HESSE-CASSEL, or ELECTORAL HESSE (Germ. Kurhessen), a state of Germany, comprised between lat. 49° 56′ & 52° 26′ N., & lon. 8° 25′ & 10° 8′ E., cap. Cassel. It is composed of six isolated portions, the largest of which, comprising Hesse proper, & including the cap., is bounded E. by Saxe-Weimar & Bavaria, S. by Frankfort & Hesse-Darmstadt, W. by Nassau, Hesse, & Waldeck, N. by Prussia & Hanover. The two principal detached portions are Schmalkalden and Schaumburg, & the smaller Barchfeld, Dorheim, and Katzenberg. Area, 4,439 sq. ms. Pop. 1846, 754,590. Surface elevated & mntnous.: the Meissner S.E. of Almerode, 2,325 feet in elevation, is the highest point of H. proper, & the Inselberg, one of the summits of Thuringer-Wald, on the frontier of Schmalkalden, is the culm. point of the state. The territory is situated in the basin of the N. Sea, & is drained by the Weser & the Rhine. The chief rivers are (1st), the Weser, with its two upper branches, the Werra & the Fulda; (2d), the Main & the Lahn, affls. of the Rhine. Among the others are the Diemel, the Edder, with the Schwalm, & the Haune, affls. of the Fulda; the Ohm, affl. of the Lahn; the Nidda & the Kinzig, affls. of the Main. Climate generally cold, except in the valley of the Main. Mean temp. at Fulda, year, 46°; winter, 27°.5; summer, 65°.6. Soil is generally infertile, except in the valleys of the principal rivers. Schmalkalden is almost entirely unproductive. Corn is raised sufficient for consumption. Chief crops, rye, barley, oats, wheat, maize. Potatoes are an important crop. Fruit of all kinds is abundant in the prov. Hanau, where apples are extensively used in making cider. The vine is cultivated in the prov. Hanau; it ripens also in the valley of the Werra, near Witzenhausen, the N.most point of its cultivation in Germany. Lint is an important object of culture. Hemp is grown only in small quantities in Hanau. The cultivation of hops, formerly important, is now nearly abandoned, and tobacco is now raised only in the valley of the Werra. Forests occupy one-third of the territory. The principal timber is oak, elm, & beech. Cattle rearing is the most important branch of rural industry. Agriculture is in a very backward state. Hesse-Cassel possesses in abundance many of the most useful minerals, the chief are iron, coal, salt; gold in small quantities is found in the sands of the Edder; silver mines, once worked, are long since abandoned, & only one copper mine is in operation. In Schmalkalden, there are seven high furnaces producing iron of excellent quality; in the rest of the state, there are other five high furnaces. The chief coal mines are in the prov. of Lower Hesse. Turf is abundant, & is mostly used for fuel. It has numerous mineral springs, & the sulphur baths of Neundorf are among the best frequented in N. Germany. Manufs. have been greatly extended since the state joined the German customs union. The most important are linen fabrics, called Osnaburgs, & next to these flannels, & the fine carpets of Hanau; the weaving of cotton has recently replaced that of linen in the environs of Fulda. Silks and velvets are manufac. at Hanau. The circle of Schmalkalden is the great centre of the manuf. of iron & steel goods of every description, & its products have long been the most celebrated in Germany. The other manufacs. comprise paper, wooden wares, pianos, chemical products, tobacco, beet-root sugar. The pottery of Gross Almerode is among the most esteemed in Europe. Hanau is celebrated for its jewellery. Chief exports, linens, carpets, jewellery, iron and steel goods. Imports colonial goods, cotton, silk, wine, brandy, &c. The chief branch of commerce is in the transit of goods, which is facilitated by the navigable rivers Main, Weser, Werra, & Fulda, & by excellent roads & railroads. In 1832, H.-Cassel, and H.-Darmstadt united with Prussia to form the origin of the German customs union. The chief educational establishments are the university at Marburg, the military & polytechnic school at Cassel, & the theological seminary at Fulda. Numerous elementary schools have recently been established, & the state is not now behind the neighboring countries in respect of education. H.-Cassel is a constitutional monarchy, the title of the sovereign is Prince Elector of Hesse. The state is divided into the provs. Lower Hesse, with Schaumburg, Upper Hesse, Fulda, & Hanau. Army 7,064 men, of whom 947 are cavalry. Public revenue (1852), 4,158,480 thalers; expenses, 4,653,930 thalers. Public debt, 1840, 1,642,566 thalers.

Area, 8,761 sq. ms. Pop. 1852, 854,314. Surface elevated & mntnous. in the N., which is traversed on W. by the Taunus, & E. by the Vogelsgebirge, & in S. by the Odenwald. Highest point the Taufstein, 2,383 ft. The greater part of the territory is situated in the basin of the Rhine, the rest in that of the Weser. Chief rivers the Rhine (which traverses all the S. portion), & its affls. the Neckar, Main, Nidder, Nahe, & Lahn; the Schwalm, & Fulda, affls. of the Weser. Climate cold, except in the valley of the Rhine. The country is essentially agricultural; more than half the territory is arable, the soil is about the most fertile & best cultivated in Germany. Chief crops, wheat in the lowlands, buckwheat in the Odenwald, oats in Rhenish Hesse, millet in Starkenburg; potatoes, generally, best in the mntn. districts. The other products are flax, hemp, hops, tobacco, & fruit. The vine is cultivated in Rhenish Hesse, which produces some of the finest growths on the Rhine. Forests belong chiefly to Upper Hesse & Starkenburg. Cattle rearing is an important branch in rural industry. Minerals comprise copper, iron, coal, & salt. Iron is mined chiefly in Upper Hesse & the Odenwald, salt at Wimpfen, coal at Dorheim. Spinning & weaving linen and hempen goods are the principal manufactures, the others comprise silk, paper, chemical products, metals to a small extent. Chief commerce, exports of agricultural produce, and colonial and manufactured goods. The principal entrepot is Mayence. The duchy is traversed, from N. to S., by the Frankfort & Mannheim r. r. HIMÁLAYA, or HIMMÁLEH, MOUNTAINS, "the dwelling of snow," the Immaus of the ancients, extend along the N. boundary of Hindostan, and form the most elevated mountain-chain in the world. They are situated between lat. 27° & 35° N., & lon. 73° & 98° E. The Hindoo Coosh range is continuous with the Himalaya mountains on the W., & on the E. they extend into Assam. The length of the range is estimated at 1,900 m.; the breadth as far as ascertained, varies from 100 m. to 350 m. The range lies between two plains, a low alluvial plain on the S., drained by the Ganges and the Brahmaputra, & the elevated tableland of Tibet on the N. & N.E. The mountains terminate on the S., towards the plain of the Ganges, in a wall-like range, from 4,000 to 5,000 feet high, broken up, at intervals, by deep precipitous chasms, through which the springs & rivers, formed from the melted snows in the interior, flow down with great impetuosity. Between these and higher ranges lie the fertile & well-cultivated valleys of Nepaul, Bhoton, and Assam. To the N., the enormous masses are separated from one another by the valleys of Cashmere, the Indus, and the Sutlej. The mean elevation of the range has been estimated at from 16,000 to 20,000 feet. Forty of the peaks have an elevation exceeding 20,000 feet. Several reach a height of 25,000 feet, and Dwalagiri is about 28,000 feet, Kunchinginga 28,178 feet, Juwahir 25,670 feet, Jumnautri 25,500 feet, Chamalri 23,929 feet. The high table-land of Tibet, forming the N. portion of the range, has a more extensive & gradual slope than the steep and abrupt mountain declivities of the S. The Himalaya maintains a considerable height and breadth along the N. of Assam, but beyond this point nothing certain is known of the range. The passes, of which there are several across the Himalaya, are at high elevations. Karakorum pass is 18,600 feet, Parang 18,500 feet, Doora Ghaut 17,750 feet, Niti Ghaut 16,814 feet. The difficulty of these ascents is extreme, especially that of the Niti Pass, which leads to Mansa, the sacred lake of Tibet. The base and summits, and probably the great mass of this range, consists of granite and crystalline-stratified rocks. A zone of silurian strata prevails at elevations of 15,000 to 18,000 feet, & tertiary strata, some of very modern date, with many organic remains, occur at various elevations along the ridge. The lower limits of the snow line is on the southern side, at an elevation of 12,981 feet, while on the northern it is 16,620 feet. Vegetation also extends much higher on the N. than on the S. side. This arises from the serenity & dryness of the air, and the radiated heat from the extensive sloping table-land towards the N., while on its S. there are more frequent gales & moisture, & an abrupt precipitous termination of the mountains. Some of the peaks in the interior are free of snow, & the contrast of this, with the other snow-covered summits, & the deep azure of the sky, forms the most picturesque scenery. The base of the mountains to the S. is covered with a dense, impenetrable jungle, separating them from the plains of India. This belt diminishes to the W. & N. of the Jumna. Cultivation is carried to the foot of the mountains. At the level of the base the vegetation is of a tropical character; at an elevation of 5,000 feet, European plants succeed. Here rice, & other grains, are cultivated; as also a species of arum, the roots of which form the food of the Hill-people, & wheat grows at an elevation of 13,000 feet. The cultivation of the tea plant has been introduced successfully in the Kumaon and Gurhwal districts. Herds of cattle are numerous, and especially sheep and goats. Mines of iron, lead, and copper exist, but have been little wrought or explored.

Length from N. to S., 1,800 miles; greatest breadth, between Cape Monze & Sylhet, along the parallel of 25° N., is 1,550 m. Area, 1 million sq. ms., or about nine times the area of Great Britain & Ireland. Coast line about 3,280 ms. There are very few harbors on the E. coast, but on the W. they are numerous & safe. The mountain ranges are the Himalaya on the N., the Vindhya in the valley of the Ganges, & the E. & W. Ghauts of the S. Peninsula (all which are noticed under their respective names). The principal rivers on the N. & E. are the Ganges & Brahmaputra, with their numerous tributaries, originating in the Himalaya, & flowing into the Bay of Bengal; the Godavery, Kistnah, Penaar, & Cauvery, also discharge their waters into the Bay of Bengal. On the W. side, the Indus, with its tributaries, flows S. from the Himalaya, & discharges its waters into the Indian Ocean. The Nerbudda & Taptee are the only other rivers of any magnitude that flow from the interior Westward. The r. courses indicate that the elevated portions of this great peninsula are towards the N. & W., & that the surface has a continuous declination to the E. & S.E. coasts. There are no lakes of any magnitude. The country is naturally divided into the plain of the Ganges & the plain of the Indus, or northern region; the Deccan or middle region, which extends S. from the Nerbudda river; & the S. region, comprehending the apex of the peninsula S. of the gap of Coimbatoor. A considerable portion of Hindostan, as far as ascertained, consists of the primary granitic formation; while igneous rocks of a later date intersect the centre of the peninsula. Coal is found in several localities, in Bengal, on the Damoda river, at Burdwan, Palamow, in the district of Cutch, & on the Indus & Sutleje. A band of lignite traverses the region of the Himalaya. Tertiary formations prevail on the eastern shores of the peninsula, from the Godavery to the Mahanudee river; & extensive alluvial formations exist in the valleys of the Ganges, Indus, &c. Few metallic mines of any importance are wrought. Diamonds are found in the Deccan, & carnelions in the W. parts of the peninsula. Among the native animals, the elephant, lion, tiger, leopard, buffalo, & goat, are the most remarkable. The climate of Hindostan is tropical & subtropical. In the S. & middle regions the heat is very great; in the N. the elevated regions of the Himalaya have a temperate & delightful climate. The monsoons prevailing on both sides of the peninsula, bring periodic rains. Many portions of the valleys of the Ganges & Indus are very fertile, producing the cereal grains & pulses, sugar, indigo, cotton, opium, ginger, & other spices. Teak & various other timber trees flourish in the Ghauts. In the southern regions the country is in a more uncultivated state, & more densely covered with forests, but interspersed with many fertile cultivated plains. The name of Hindoo was applied by the Persians to the people inhabiting the country between the Himalaya mountains & Vindhya range; they belong to the Indo-European branch of the human race, & speak dialects of the Sanscrit language; but the peninsula of India was peopled by other aboriginal races, having more of the Negro character than the modern Hindoos. To these are ascribed the most anc. monuments & temple-caves, & traces of their tribes still exist; the most numerous are the Gonds, who occupy the mountain region from Caucasus N.W. to the sources of the Taptee & Whurda rivers; the Bheels, who occupy the N. Ghauts & the Vindhya mountains, & the Coolies, who possess a tract of the western Ghauts. These are of a darker hue, & in a lower state of civilization than the Hindoos. Besides these, there are about ten millions of Arabs & Persians in Hindostan, from one to two millions of descendants of Portuguese settlers, & about 60,000 Europeans, chiefly British. The Hindoo pop. is divided into four classes or castes, of which there are Brahmans, or priests, Kshatriyas or military, Vaisyas, or agriculturists & herdsmen, & Sudras or artizans. Throughout most part of India a peculiar village system is established. The villages are so many little republics, each providing for its own wants, & independent, in general, of any relations with other villages, having its own schoolmaster, accountant, washerman, barber, blacksmith, & electing its own potail, or head-man, who assesses the villagers for the land tax. The village being taxed with a certain sum, should any of the inhabitants fail in ability to pay their portion, the rest make up the sum wanting. Under this system the land revenue is collected, not only in the native governments, where it composes more than 9-10ths of the total revenue, but also throughout most part of the presids. of Bombay & Agra. In Malabar, Travancore, &c., a singular practice is in force, by which property descends in the female, & not in the male line. Their theology is contained in the ancient books of the Vedas, which inculcate the worship of their deities, Brahma, Vishnu, & Siva; the transmigration of souls, & their final absorption into the deity. Buddhism had also its origin in Hindostan, & Mohammedanism now extensively prevails. Philosophy, science, & the arts, were cultivated from an early period by the Hindoos, especially the domestic arts of weaving, dyeing, & working in metals & gems. They have never greatly excelled in music or painting; but in architecture they have arrived at considerable eminence. From the earliest records of history, the nations of the western world derived their merchandize from India. The country was entered & partly subdued by Alexander the Great. About 126 B. C., it was also invaded by the Tartars or Scythians of the Greeks, & Sakas of the Hindoos. From the 10th to the 12th centuries of the Christian era, the Mohammedans overran & conquered considerable portions of Hindostan; & subsequently the Mogul empire was established. In 1498, the Portuguese were the first European nation who invaded & established themselves in India, at Goa, & along the Malabar coast; & in the beginning of the 17th century, the Dutch & English commenced their settlements. HONDURAS, Republic of Central America, lat. 13° to 16° N., lon. 85° 40′ to 89° 5′ W. Bounded N. & E. by the Caribbean Sea & Mosquitia; W., Guatemala; S., Salvador, & the bay of Conchagua on the Pacific; S.E., Musquitia & Nicaragua. Area, 64,680 geo. sq. m., & is divided in 7 departments, viz.:—

Departments.	Pop.	Departments.	Pop.
Comayagua	85,000	Tejucigalpa	45,000
Cholutaca	38,000	Olancho	45,000
Gracias	79,000	Santa Barbara	35,000
Yoro	31,000
Total			308,000

Its surface is irregular, being traversed by numerous mountain ranges in all directions, but generally of moderate elevation. The valleys between are numerous & fertile, & there is a lake, about 18 m. long by 10 m. broad, near the centre. Its mineral wealth is very considerable, & comprises gold, silver, lead, & copper, the two latter found in a variety of combinations, and the two former frequently combined with each other; also opals, emeralds, asbestos, & cinnabar. There are some considerable rivers in the state, the largest of which are the Chamelicon, Ulua, & Aguan, all flowing to the Caribbean Sea, and the Cholutaca, an affluent of the Pacific. The climate is extremely salubrious, especially in the interior parts, but it inclines to a temperature rather high, particularly bordering the N. coast & the shores of the Pacific, where deposits of vegetable matter, acted upon by a tropical sun, with a heat often of 120°, produces miasma, & generates mosquitos, sand flies, & other annoying insects. There are some extensive forests, abounding in fine timber, such as mahogany, cedar, mora (a species of fustic), &c. The principal cultivated productions are maize, beans, some wheat, rice, & plantains, but it is doubtful if the quantity raised is sufficient for the consumption of the population. Some tobacco also is grown. The country abounds in cattle of a fine breed, but this description of property does not afford much revenue to the owners, the price of the animals slaughtered for consumption being extremely low. The state is divided into seven departments, named after their principal towns, of which Comayagua is the capital of the Republic. The principal ports are Truxillo, on the Caribbean Sea, & Port San Lorenzo, in the Bay of Conchagua, in the Pacific. Honduras has a Legislative chamber of 14 deputies, a Senate of 14 members, and a President elected by the two chambers.

HONDURAS (BAY OF), a wide inlet of the Caribbean Sea, mostly between lat. 16° & 18° N., & lon. 84° & 89° 50′ W., having S. the republics of Honduras & Guatemala, & W. British Honduras & Yucatan. HUDSON, a river of the state of New York, though less in its length & in the amount of water which it discharges than many others, is one of the most important in the United States. The Hudson, proper, rises by two branches in Adirondack mountains. The eastern branch from the N. passes through Schroon lake, & is sometimes called Schroon branch; and the western has a circuitous course from the N.W., and is considered as the main branch or Hudson. About 40 miles from the source of each, they unite in Warren co. After a course of 15 miles S., the Hudson receives the Sacandaga, on the line between Montgomery and Saratoga counties. The Sacandaga rises in Hamilton co., & first runs S.E., & then N.W. & W., to its junction below Jessup's falls. The Hudson then runs to the east of S. 15 miles to Hadley falls; it then turns to the N.E. 20 miles to Glen's falls. Its direction is then nearly S. to its entrance into New York bay. Forty m. below Glen's falls it receives from the W. the Mohawk, its greatest tributary. From the junction of the Mohawk to its mouth, is about 170 miles. The whole length of the Hudson, from its source to its entrance into New York bay, is a little over 300 miles. So straight is this river between Albany & New York, that the distance is less by water than by land. The tide flows to a little above Albany. It is navigable for the largest ships 118 miles, to Hudson, & for sloops & large steamboats 145 miles above New York, to Albany. Small sloops also proceed to Troy, & through the dam & lock to Waterford, about 8 miles farther. Through a considerable part of its course the banks are elevated, & in some parts high, rocky, & precipitous; particularly in its passage through the Highlands, 53 miles above the city of New York. The scenery on the banks of the Hudson is highly picturesque. The city of New York owes much of its prosperity, & its pre-eminent advantages, to this noble river, connected as it is by the Erie canal with the great lakes, & by the Champlain canal with the St. Lawrence river. By no other route can an equally favorable water communication be had with the great West. There are many large and flourishing towns on the Hudson. The principal on the E. side are Troy, Hudson, & Poughkeepsie; & on the W. side Albany, Cattskill, & Newburgh; besides many others on both sides. Its waters were the theatre of the first successful attempt to apply steam to the propelling of vessels by Fulton & Livingston in 1808. As a navigable medium of commerce this river is unrivalled. During the year 1850 there passed from the interior through its channel, or by railroad conveyance along its basin, products of the forest valued at $10,315,117; agriculture, $38,311,545; manufactures, $3,960,864; merchandise, $563,615; and various other articles, $2,323,495; showing a grand total of about 54 millions. The total value of the various kind of property sent from the seaboard, via of the Hudson river, in 1850, amounted to $74,826,999, & in 1851, $80,739,899.

Pop. 1840, 9,488; 1850, 21,819.

HUDSON, p-t., Hillsboro' co., N. H., 63 S. by E. Concord, 263 W. Incorporated in 1746. Surface hilly, with level & fertile strips bordering the streams. Merrimac r. flows on its W. border, across which is a bridge to Dunstable. It has a fulling m., a woollen fac., 2 grist m., 3 saw m., 10 schools. Pop. 1840, 1,148; 1850, 1,312.

HUDSON, city, port of entry, & capital of Columbia co., N. Y., is situated on the left bank of Hudson riv., at the head of ship navigation, and on the Hudson r.,

116 m. from New York, 29 S. Albany, 335 W. Pop. 1820, 2,270; 1830, 5,392; 1840, 5,672; 1850, 6,286. Its front consists of a bold promontory, rising 60 feet above the level of the river, which has been formed into a pleasant promenade, commanding a fine view of the river & of the surrounding country. On either side of this promontory is a spacious bay, with a sufficient depth of water for the largest vessels. The city is regularly laid out, with streets crossing each other at right angles; with the exception of two streets near the river, which follow the direction of the shore. The main street extends S.E. more than a m. to Prospect hill, 200 feet high, to which the ground gradually rises. On the N. side of this street, toward its upper end, is a public square. There is another square in the S. part of the city, on which the court-house is situated. It is 116 feet long, the central part 40 by 60 feet, & 60 feet high, surmounted by a dome, & entered by a portico of 6 Ionic columns. The wings are 34 feet front & 40 feet deep, & 2 stories high. There are 10 churches,—1 Baptist, 1 Dutch Reformed, 1 Episcopal, 2 Friends, 1 Methodist, 1 Presbyterian, 1 Roman Catholic, and 2 Universalist,—the Hudson Academy, Hudson Female Seminary, the Franklin Literary Association, with a respectable library & philosophical apparatus, the Hudson Lunatic Asylum, & a number of select schools, 2 banks, with an aggregate capital of $350,000, 4 printing offices issuing a daily, 5 weekly newspapers, and 1 monthly publication, an iron foundry, 3 machine shops, a tannery, a paper fac., &c. The city is supplied with pure water, brought 2 miles in iron pipes from a spring at the foot of Becraft's mountain. This city was formerly much engaged in the West India trade. It has several steamboats, freight barges, sloops, &c., engaged in transportation; & it is one of the regular stopping places for steamboats between New York and Albany. A steam ferry-boat plies between this city & Athens, on the opposite side of the river. The Hudson & Berkshire r. r. connects this city with West Stockbridge, Mass., and thence with Boston. Several streams in the immediate vicinity afford considerable water power, which is made available for manufacturing purposes. Hudson was settled in 1784 by emigrants from R. Island & Massachusetts. It was incorporated a city in 1785.

HUDSON, p-t., Summit co., O., 137 N.E. Columbus, 335 W. Surface level or rolling; soil a fertile clay loam, adapted to grazing & to grain. The village is pleasantly situated on a plain, & on the Cleveland & Pittsburg r. r., 26 m. from Cleveland. It contains 4 churches,—2 Congregational, 1 Episcopal, and 1 Methodist.—4 stores, a printing office issuing a weekly newspaper & a semi-monthly publication, and 650 inhabitants. The Western Reserve College is located here, on elevated ground in the N.E. part of the village, & its buildings consist of 2 spacious college edifices, an elegant chapel 3 stories high, containing recitation rooms, the library & philosophical hall, a theological college, a president's house, and a neat and convenient astronomical observatory. The grounds around the colleges are extensive, & are ornamented with trees & shrubbery. In the rear is a large building, devoted to manual labor. This institution was founded in 1826, has a president & 8 professors, or other instructors, 181 alumni, of whom 48 have been ministers of the gospel, 57 students, & 8,000 vols. in its libraries. It has an elegant & extensive philosophical apparatus. The commencement is on the second Thursday in July. Its funds are respectable, and its prospects promising. Pop. of the t. 1840, 1,220; 1850, 1,457.

HULL (KINGSTON ON), a parl. & munic. bor., river port, town, co. of itself, Engl., in co. York, E. Riding, on the N. side of the Humber, at the influx of the Hull, 22 m. N.W. the Spurn-Head, 36 m. S.E. York. Lat. of citadel 53° 44′ 6″ N., lon. 0° 20′ W. Area of town & old munic. bor. 960 ac. Pop. 41,629; & of co. of town, which extends for some distance W.-ward along the Humber, 11,600 ac. Pop. 45,173. Pop., in 1851, of new munic. & parl. bor., 84,690. The old town of Hull, about ¾ m. in length, N. to S., by half as much in breadth, stands on the W. side of the river Hull, at its entrance into the Humber, & is enclosed from N. to W. by three noble docks, crossed by movable bridges. Beyond these are Myton on the W., Sculcoates on the N., both containing populous quarters of the modern town; & beyond the Hull, on the E., are Sutton & Drypool, with a large citadel occupying the E. angle, formed by the Hull & Humber. The town has a respectable, but not a striking appearance; it is generally well built, & pretty well drained. A good line of streets runs from the Humber N.ward through the middle of the old town, having in its centre the market-place, in which are the fine church of Holy Trinity, a good market-house, & a gilt equestrian statue of William III. This line is crossed by several others leading to still broader thoroughfares beyond the docks, all which present good shops, & commonly a very busy scene of traffic. In Sculcoates are many broad & handsome streets of private residences, & others on the W. part of the town; but this latter quarter also contains some long thoroughfares of an inferior order, & the E. & N.E. suburbs are mostly composed of streets of the same class. Extensive warehouses, backed by narrow lanes, border the muddy river Hull, along which the town & suburbs Trippet & Sculcoates, extend for nearly 2 m. from the Humber. The docks, constructed successively since 1775, on the site previously occupied by fortifications, have an aggregate length of 1,087 yards, breadth varying from 250 to 400 feet, & a total area of 24 acres, besides a basin between two of the piers on the Humber; they are surrounded by broad quays & large warehouses, have a depth varying at high tides from about 20 to 27 feet, and are crowded with shipping of all nations. At the head of one of them is a fine column with a colossal statue of Wilberforce. Holy Trinity church is a cruciform building, 272 feet in length, & one of the finest specimens of Gothic architecture in England, with a pinnacled tower 140 feet in height, rich internal decorations & numerous monuments. There are in all 51 churches, viz.,—4 Baptist, 1 Brethren, 15 Episcopal, 1 Friends, 8 Independent, 1 Jews' synagogue, 15 Methodist, 1 Mormon, 1 Presbyterian, 1 Roman Catholic, 1 Unitarian, and 1 isolated congregation. Amongst the most conspicuous public buildings are the custom-house, exchange, pilot, dock, excise, & stamp offices, the infirmary, two theatres, concert-hall, colleges, work-house, jail, mansion-house, new baths & wash-houses, terminus of the Hull & Selby r. r., & a magnificent hotel adjoining it. The Trinity guild, founded in 1369, for decayed seamen & their widows, has an elegant edifice in the Tuscan order, containing a council-room with good portraits, a museum, a school for boys destined for the merchant service, & dwellings for pensioners. Hull has numerous hospitals & other charities, a charter-house founded by the De la Poles in 1380; Hull & Kingston colleges, which give instruction similar to King's & University colleges, London, & have two elegant buildings in the N.W. suburb; a medical school, a grammar school founded in 1486, having two exhibitions to Cambridge, the Vicar's & Cogan's schools, the latter with a revenue of 400*l.* a-year, a great number of charitable schools, refuges for the insane & the destitute, a dispensary, penitentiary, & lying-in-charity. A public subscription library possesses 25,000 vols., & here are a mechanics' institute, lyceum, & athenæum, all having libraries, a sailors' institute, a savings' bank, and masonic lodges. Outside of the N.W. suburb is a zoological garden. Hull is connected by r. r. with Scarborough, Whitby, York, & all the manufacturing towns of the W. Riding, for the export of manufs. of which it is the great outlet; & it has been lately put in more ready communication with London & the centre of England, by a continuation of the E. counties r. r. to New Holland on the opposite bank of the Humber, 2¼ m. distant. The Trent, Ouse, Don, &c., tributaries of the Humber, & navigable canals, connect it also with a large inland territory. Principal exports are cotton & woollen stuffs, and yarn, earthenwares, hardwares, metals, rapeseed & corn, the latter chiefly imported previously, with wool, bones, timber, hemp, flax, madder, skins, & other produce from Germany, Denmark, & the Baltic; with which, & with N. A., its foreign trade is the most active. Its coasting trade is highly important, & it receives large quantities of coal. Its merchants were the first in England who embarked in the northern whale fishery, but its fisheries have greatly declined. It communicates by steam-packets with London, Yarmouth, Leith, Berwick, Aberdeen, Hamburgh, Rotterdam, & Copenhagen, many times weekly, & also continually with Selby, Goole, Gainsborough, York, and Grimsby. Hull has not been renowned as a manufacturing town, but of late years a joint-stock company has been established which possesses three large cotton & flax mills, employing in all 3,000 hands, & producing 100,000 yards of cotton cloth weekly. Ship-building, & its auxiliary manufs., are extensively carried on, & here are foundries, tanneries, potteries, some large breweries, sugar refineries, soap & gas works, & various corn & oil mills, many in the E. suburbs impelled by wind, and which gives a Dutch appearance to the scenery along the Humber. The town has a branch of the Bank of England, many other banks, & several weekly newspapers. Markets, Tuesday & Friday, & on Saturday for retail & supply. Wool markets on Tuesdays, during all July, & two last weeks in June, & first in Aug. Fairs, July 10, Oct. 10, & Dec. 10, the two former of 6 days each. The bor. is divided into 6 wards, & governed by a Mayor, 13 aldermen, & 42 councillors. It has quarter sessions, & a court of requests. Hull returns 2 mems. to H. of C. This town, under the name of Myton-wyk, appears to have been of importance in the time of Athelstan: but its consequence as a port dates from the time of Edward I., who conferred on it the royal designation, Kingston. In the civil war of Charles I., it was the first town to close its gates against the king, & it successfully sustained two sieges of the royal troops, in 1642 & 1643.—II. (Bishop's), a township, co. Chester, pa. Great Budworth, 8 miles N.N.W. Northwich. Pop. 1,828.—III. (Bishop's), a pa., co. Somerset, 1¼ m. W. Taunton. Area, 2,314 ac. In 1849, by an imperial decree, Croatia and Sclavonia were officially separated from Hungary, but the Banat—cos. Temesvar, Torantal, Krasso, & part of Arad—together with the cos. Bacs between the Danube & Theiss, was severed from it & erected into a Servian crownland, or separate "crown land" of Austria; and Hungary proper, divested also of the previously annexed Transylvanian counties & the littorales, was divided into the following districts, which are subdivided into comitats, the former sub-divisions of circles and counties being abolished:—

HUNGARY UNDER THE ORGANIZATION OF 1849. POP. OF 1851.

Districts.	Situation.	Pop.	Official Language.
Pesth	Centre; chiefly between the Danube and the Theiss.	1,599,819	Magyar and German.

Oedenburg	S.W.; conterminous with the Ola circle, S. and W. of the Danube.	1,782,658	Magyar.
Total of the 5 districts divided into 45 comitats		7,864,262

The Carpathians form a natural boundary on the N. of Hungary, & their ramifications render this part of the country a mountainous region. They have different names in the 33 counties which they traverse. The most important for their metals are the mountains of Barsch, Honth, Sohl, Liptau, Gomor, & Zips. In the E. the Carpathians of Transylvania traverse the counties of Szathmar, Bihar, Arad, Krasso, & Temes. In the W., beyond the Danube, the country is traversed by contreforts of the Alps of Styria, to which belong Bakony-wald and the Vertes mountains. The countries of Croatia and the Littorale, in the S.W. are crossed by branches of the Dinaric Alps. These different mountains enclose two great plains, the smaller of which, about 4,200 sq. m. in extent, is in the W., between the offsets of the Alps & Carpathians, and the other in the E., with an area of about 21,000 sq. m., traversed by the Danube & the Theiss, & has an elevation of from 300 to 400 feet above the level of the sea. This region is so flat that the rivers have a very sluggish course, & a great part of the surface is covered with marshes & sand downs. The rivers of Hungary belong to the basins of the Danube & the Theiss, and have generally a S. course, only one, the Poprad, having a N. direction. Principal river, the Danube, which enters Hungary on the W. at Presburg, flows generally E. 270 m. to Waitzen, then S. 180 m. to Vukovar, and again E. 190 m. to Orsova, where it enters Wallachia. Its principals affls. in Hungary are, on right the Leythe, Raab, Csaba, Sarvitz, Drave, Save, & Temes; left the March (on W. border), Waag, Neutra, Gran, & the Theiss, which has a S. course of nearly 400 m., & numerous large tributaries.

The principal lakes are the Platten See (or Lake Balaton), Neusiedler See, & Lake Palits,—the most extensive marsh in the Hansag, between the counties Wieselburg & Oedenburg, which has an area of 126 sq. m.; the whole extent of marsh is reckoned at 1,932 sq. m. The largest canals are the Franzens canal, between the Danube and the Theiss, & the Bega canal, in the Banat, which also joins the Danube. The climate varies exceedingly: in the mountainous districts it is cold & severe, while in the S. it is so genial that the vine, chesnut, fig, and other southern fruits, are grown. It is in general healthy, except in the marshy districts, chief mineral products are gold, silver, copper, cobalt, salt, alum & coal. Gold is most abundant in Transylvania, & silver in Hungary. The gold washings of several of the rivers are important. Copper is abundant, yearly average about 54,452 centners; and iron, widely distributed, yields an average of 269,997 centners. Lead, on an average of 5 years, yields only 4,178 centners. In 1845 the amount was only 33,076 tons. Opals are found in the county Saros. Coal and turf both occur, the latter is most widely distributed. Coal is but little worked. Mineral springs are numerous, and many of them celebrated for their medicinal qualities. Hungary is generally fertile in grain, which is exported to a considerable extent. Chief crops, rye, barley, oats, maize, millet, buck-wheat, and rice. The level regions of the cos. Bacs & Temesvar possess the richest soil, & have been called the granary of Hungary. The mountains are covered with dense forests. The cultivation of the vine is carried to great perfection. Next to France, Hungary produces the greatest quantity of wine of any country in Europe, and the quality of several of its vintages, especially that of Tokay, is unrivalled. Tobacco is an important product, the annual amount averaging 400,000 centners, great part of which is exported. Domestic animals comprise horses, horned cattle, buffalos, sheep, and swine. In 1845, the number of horses was reckoned at 1,200,000. In the N.W. counties they are of middle size, in the S. & E. they are smaller & more active. The rich pastures of Hungary produce some of the finest cattle in Europe. Great improvements have recently been made in the breed of sheep, the number of which in 1838, was reckoned at 18,000,000. Swine are reared in the forests in vast herds, the number in 1838 was supposed to be upwards of 8,000,000. Wild & domestic fowls are abundant. Bees are extensively reared, and in 1827, 18,730 cwt. of honey, and 2,289 cwt. wax were exported. Fish are abundant in the rivers and lakes, and the Theiss is reckoned the richest in fish of any river in Europe. The chief occupations of the pop. are agriculture, cattle rearing, and mining. Manufs., which are unimportant, comprise woollens, linens, silks, paper (which is made by English machinery in the county Gömör), tobacco, & iron ware. There are 300 breweries. The best beer is made at Pesth. Placed between rich pastoral counties on the E., & manufacturing dists. on the W., Hungary is well situated for trade, its only sea coast, indeed, is a slip of 123 m. on the Adriatic, at its S.W. extremity; but it has numerous large navigable rivers, including the Danube, with its affls. the Theiss, Drave & Save. From 500 to 1,000 vessels trade on the Danube from Hungary to Vienna, exchanging grain, and other raw materials for merchandise. A new impulse was given to this trade by the introduction of steam-packets in 1830. The roads in many parts of the country are very bad, but r. r. communication has been established in the W. portion. [Austria.]

Hungary is peopled by numerous distinct races, speaking different languages, the chief are Hungarians or Magyars, Slavonians, Germans, & Wallachians. The Magyars are of Asiatic origin, many of them are Protestants, and the only people of E. Europe who hold liberty of conscience as a political canon. Their language has recently been substituted for Latin in official correspondence. The Slavonians are more numerous than the Magyars. Their different races include the Slowaks, Croats, Russniaks, Wendians, &c. The Wallachians have also their peculiar language. The Germans, who for 8 centuries have been spread over the country, have in many places lost their language and nationality. Besides these principal nations, there are many Greeks, Armenians, Jews and Gipsies. Of the inhabitants, 6,068,280 are Roman Catholics; 780,300 Greek Catholics; 827,800 Protestants, the Augsburg Confession; 1,665,600, do., Helvetian do.; 1,402,400 Greek (not united); 265,650 Jews. The chief educational establishments are the university at Pesth, a lyceum at Erlau, 7 schools of philosophy, 55 gymnasia, 66 Latin, & numerous parish schools. Education in general is in a very backward state, although the higher nobility are well educated, & generally familiar with foreign languages. The first inhabitants of Hungary mentioned in history, were the Pannonians. The Magyars conquered it in the 9th century. Their followers embraced Christianity. The last duke, Stephen, took the title of king in the year 1000, & added Transylvania to his dominions. The first prince of the house of Hapsburg who reigned in Hungary, was Ferdinand I., who was elected by the diet in 1526; the succession was fixed in the Imperial house in 1687. Since the termination of the civil wars in 1711, the house of Austria has held possession of the country; but as the union on the part of Hungary was voluntary, it was never in reality a dependency of Austria. The two countries were united by having a common sovereign, but the power of the king was controlled by the Hungarian diet, & recent disputes have led to a complete change of relations between the two countries. On 30th May, 1848, the diet of Klausenburg decreed the union of Transylvania with Hungary, and, by Imperial manifesto of 10th June, 1840, the military frontier was also annexed to the country. At a diet held at Debreczin, May 1849, Hungary, including Transylvania & Croatia, declared itself an independent republic, & forthwith proceeded to vindicate its rights by an appeal to arms. The Hungarians, after various successes, drove the Austrians entirely out of Hungary. Austria called to her aid the Russians, and together, after a severe struggle, overran Hungary, & completely subdued the people for the time. The forces brought into the field by the Hungarians at any one time, never exceeded 135,000 men, with 400 pieces of artillery, against whom were opposed in the last campaign 150,000 Russian & 110,000 Austrian soldiers, besides Servians, Wallacks, &c., making a total of upwards of 300,000 men. [Croatia, Slavonia, Transylvania, &c.]

HURON LAKE, one of the five great lakes of N. America, lies between lake Superior on the N. W., lake Michigan on the W., & lakes Erie & Ontario on the S. & S.E. Its shape is so irregular, that it is difficult accurately to determine its exact dimensions. Its length from N. to S. is 260 m., & 160 m. in breadth from E. to W., in its widest part, but exclusive of the bay on the N.E., it is only 90, & its circumference 1,100 m. Its principal indentations are Saginaw bay, extending into Michigan, & two others; one immediately north of Manitou islands, & the other southeast of them. The latter, called Georgian bay, is about 170 m. long, by 70 broad; almost a separate sheet of water, divided from Huron by a nearly continuous series of islands which are closely connected by the great peninsula of Cabot's Head, & with Point de Tour, the easternmost cape of northern Michigan. Manitou (or Great Spirit) Island is the largest of the group, and Drummond island separates another sheet of water from the main lake, 80 m. long & 20 broad. The boundary between the United States & Canada passing along the middle of the main Huron 225 m., & betw. Lesser Manitou & Drummond islands, by what is called the middle passage, & curves round to the N. & W. 25 m., to the entrance of St. Mary's river. The elevation of the surface of Lake Huron above the surface of the ocean is 574 ft., or less than that of Lake Superior by 53 ft., or than that of Lake Michigan by 4 ft. The greatest depth toward its W. shore is at least 1,000 ft., & its mean depth 900 ft., or about 300 ft. below the level of the Atlantic. The largest of the Manitou islands, called Great Manitoulin, is 90 m. long, & in its widest part, nearly 30 broad. It receives the waters of Lake Superior by St. Mary's strait or river; those of Lake Michigan by straits of Michilimackinac, & discharges its own waters by the river St. Clair. It receives the waters of Lake Nipissing on the N. by Francis, & of Lake Simcoe on the E., by Severn river. Lake Huron is subject to violent storms, which renders its navigation dangerous. Though very deep, it is generally shallow near the shores. It has but few good harbors, & places of much importance on its borders. There are 8 light-houses on its coasts, on the American side & 1 on the Canadian side. (See Lakes,—Commerce of.)

ICELAND, an isl. under Denmark, in the Atlantic Ocean, 700 m. W. Norway, & about 200 m. E. Greenland, between lat. 63° 24′ & 66° 33′ N., & lon. 13° 30′ & 24° 30′ W. Area, with adjacent isles, estimated at 37,800 sq. m. Pop. 1850, 60,000. Surface mntnous.; soil volcanic; traversed from E. to W. by separate mountain masses, the ramifications of which form on the N.E. & W. coasts numerous fiords or bays, which extend far into the interior. The highest mountains are Oräfajokel (lat. 64° N.), 6,405 feet; Snäfell (lat. 64° 48′), 5,968 feet; Hecla, 5,110 feet. The central portion is uninhabited & little known. There are many large streams which flow generally with great rapidity. Glaciers cover a surface of upwards of 4,000 sq. m.; they exist in all the mountains above 4,000 feet in elevation, & extend down to the sea. In the N., where the hills are generally low, there are few glaciers. The greatest mass of ice is in the S.E. of the isl., & this region has for centuries been the scene of the most violent volcanic eruptions. There are 30 known volcanoes in Iceland, 8 of which have been active within a century. The most destructive volcanic eruptions on record were those of 1294, 1541, 1636, 1693, 1783, & the eruption of Hecla, 2 September 1845, to 8th April 1846, on which occasion the ashes reached the Orkney Islands. The isl. also contains numerous small mud volcanoes & intermittent thermal springs, in the chief of which the Great Geyser, the water, at a depth of 72 feet, is 30° above the boiling point. The climate is very variable; storms of extreme violence are frequent; summer moist; in winter the sky is dark & gloomy, but lighted up by brilliant displays of the aurora borealis. Temperature more elevated than in any other country in the same latitude; mean of year at Reikavik 40° Fahr.; the S. coasts, washed by a prolongation of the gulf stream, are much milder than the N., & generally free from ice. Forests formerly abounded, but the isl. is now destitute of trees, except a few stunted birches; the want of fuel is severely felt, although the gulf stream and the polar currents occasionally float drift-wood to its shores, & a fine white turf is used. No grain of any kind can be raised; but cabbage and potatoes are cultivated. The flora of Iceland is nearly allied to that of Scandinavia, comprising mosses & a few shrubs. The most important domestic animal is the sheep, which, with the horse, ox, pig, & dog, were introduced from Norway during last century. Rein deer, introduced in 1770, now exist in large herds, but are not domesticated. The polar bear is sometimes cast on the shores from the northern ice-fields. Fish are very abundant on all the coasts, and form the chief support of the inhabitants. Birds are very numerous, the most valuable of which is the eider-duck. No reptiles of any kind exist in the isl. There are no manufs.; & the only commerce consists in the exchange of wool, butter, skins, fish, & oil, for European manufs. The island is divided into 3 amts. or counties, viz., Süderamt, Westeramt, & Norder & Osteramt, & these are subdivided into 19 syssel, The island was discovered by the Northmen in the 9th century, & came into the possession of Denmark in 1380. The Icelanders belong to the Scandinavian race; they are attached to their country, and hospitable to strangers; their religion is Lutheran; there are few schools, but domestic education is general, and the people are intelligent. Their affairs are regulated by a council called Althing, composed of 1 representative for Reikiavik, & 1 for each of the 19 syssel; their first meeting was held on 1st July, 1845. The only town is Reikiavik. Pop. 900. There are upwards of 20 trading villages, mostly on the coasts.

* For notices of places not here mentioned, see the initials J or Y.

Federal representative population, 851,470.

The surface of the state is generally level. It has no mountains, though the northern & southern parts are hilly & broken. The portion of the state south of a line from the mouth of the Wabash to the mouth of the Kaskaskia is generally covered with timber, but north of this the prairie country predominates. The eye sometimes wanders over immense plains covered with grass, with no other boundary of its vision but the distant horizon, though the view is often broken by occasional woodlands. The dry prairies are generally from 30 to 100 feet higher than the bottom lands on the rivers, & very fertile. A range of bluffs commences on the margin of the Mississippi a short distance above the mouth of the Ohio, & extends north beyond the Des Moines rapids, sometimes rising abruptly from the water's edge, but generally a few miles distant from it, leaving between the bluffs & the river, a strip of alluvial formation, of inexhaustible fertility. The banks of the Illinois & Kaskaskia in some places present sublime & picturesque scenery. Illinois is rich in minerals; in the N.W. part of the state are inexhaustible quarries of lead ore; bituminous coal has a wide range; iron ore is found in many localities, & copper, zinc, &c. Salt springs in the S. part of the state, from which salt is extensively manufactured; & there are some few sulphur & chalybeate springs.

There were in this state in 1850, 5,039,545 acres of land improved, & 6,997,867 of unimproved land in farms; cash value of farms, $96,133,290, and the value of implements & machinery, $6,405,561; live stock &c., horses, 267,653; asses & mules, 10,573; milch cows, 294,671; working oxen, 76,156; other cattle, 541,209; sheep, 894,043; swine, 1,915,907; value of live stock, $24,209,258; of slaughtered animals, $4,972,286.

Agricultural Products, &c.—Wheat, 9,414,575 bushels; rye, 83,364; Ind. corn, 57,646,984; oats, 10,087,241; barley, 110,795; buckwheat, 184,504; peas and beans, 82,814; potatoes, 2,514,861; sweet potatoes, 157,483; value of products of the orchard, $446,049; produce of market gardens, $127,494; pounds of butter made, 12,526,543; of cheese, 1,278,225; maple sugar, 248,904; molasses, 8,354 gallons; bees wax & honey, 869,444; wool, 2,150,113 pounds produced; flax, 160,063; silk cocoons, 47; hops, 3,551; tobacco, 841,394; hay, 601,952 tons; hemp, 149; clover seed, 3,427 bushels; other grass seeds, 14,380; flax seed, 10,787; and 2,997 gallons of wine were made. Value of home made manufactures, $1,155,902.

The Illinois is the largest river in the state. Fox &

Des Plaines rivers, its two largest branches from the north, rise in Wisconsin, & with Kankakee river from Indiana, form the Illinois, which, after a course of 400 miles, enters the Mississippi twenty miles above the Missouri. It is navigable a distance of about 250 miles. Rock river rises in Wisconsin, & after a course of 300 miles, mostly in Illinois, empties into the Mississippi. The Kaskaskia rises near the middle of the state, and after a southwesterly course of 250 miles, enters the Mississippi 63 miles below the Missouri. It is navigable for boats 150 miles. The Wabash forms a part of the east boundary. The little Wabash, after a course of 130 miles, enters the Wabash a little above its junction with the Ohio. Peoria lake through which the Illinois river flows, about 150 miles from its mouth is a beautiful sheet of water twenty miles long & two broad.

The principal commercial depôt in the north is Chicago, on Lake Michigan, at the mouth of Chicago riv., the harbor of which has been much improved by piers extending into the lake. The most commercial place on the Mississippi is Aton, 24 miles above the Missouri. It has a fine landing place with a natural wharf, consisting of flat rock, well suited for the purpose. The other principal places are Springfield, Quincy, Galena, Peoria, Vandalia, Kaskaskia, Cairo, &c.

Manufactures, &c.—There were in the state in 1850, 16 woollen factories, with a capital invested of $154,500, employing 124 males & 54 females, manufacturing 306,900 yards of cloth, and 137,000 pounds of yarn valued at $206,572; 2 establishments making pig iron, with a capital of $65,000, employing 150 persons, producing 2,700 tons of pig iron, &c., valued at $70,200; 29 establishments with a capital of $260,400, employing 332 persons, & making 4,160 tons of castings &c., valued at $441,185;—280 flouring & grist mills, 487 saw mills; 94 printing offices, 10 daily, 4 tri-weekly, 94 weekly, 2 semi-monthly, 7 monthly, & 1 quarterly publications. Total value of manufactured articles, $5,200,000. There were in Jan. 1854, 1,262 miles of railroad in operation, and 1,945 miles in course of construction.

Religion, &c.—There were in the state in 1850, 282 Baptist churches, 69 Christian, 46 Congregational, 2 Dutch Reformed, 27 Episcopal, 2 Free, 6 Friends, 3 German Reformed, 42 Lutheran, 405 Methodist, 2 Moravian, 206 Presbyterian, 59 Roman Catholic, 1 Swedenborgian, 4 Tunker, 30 Union, 4 Unitarian, 7 Universalist, & 26 other sects, the whole having 1,223 churches; total value of church property, $1,482,185.

Education, &c.—Illinois College at Jacksonville, Shurtleff College at Upper Alton, McKendree College at Lebanon, Knox College at Galesburg, the University of St. Mary, of the lake at Chicago, Alton Theological Seminary at Upper Alton, & the Rush Medical College at Chicago, the whole having in 1850, 542 students. In 1498, India was first visited by Vasco de Gama, & subsequently the Portuguese & the Dutch established settlements on the peninsula, but the former never acquired more than a paltry territory on the W. coast, & the latter a few commercial factories. The French influence in India, at one time considerable, also yielded to the superior enterprise of the Brit., & finally the French relinquished the field. In 1625, the first English settlement was made, by a company of merchants, in a small spot of the Coromandel coast, of 5 sq. m. transferred in 1653 to Madras. A short time previous a settlement had also been obtained at Hooghly, which afterwards became the Calcutta station. In 1687 Bombay was erected into a presidency. In 1773, by an act of the British legislature, the 3 provinces were placed under the administration of a governor-general, and Calcutta was made the seat of a supreme court of judicature, the presidences of Madras & Bombay being made subordinate to that of Bengal. Hitherto the affairs of India had been managed by the company, but in 1784 a board of control was appointed by Government, the president of which became the secretary of state for India. From the year 1750, when the warlike acquisition of territory commenced under Lord Clive, a succession of conquests, almost forced upon the British contrary to their inclinations, have now placed nearly all India under their sway. The court of directors of the East India company have the power of electing the governor general, subject to the approval of the government, & they have also the power of his recall. The company also hold the patronage of other appointments till the expiry of the act in 1854; but in 1833 their exclusive right to trade was abolished in favor of a free trade. The governor-general, assisted by a council of 5 members, has the power of making laws for the whole of British India, subject to the approval of the home government, & he has the sole direction of the army, which is under the command of a commander-in-chief. There is a free press & equal laws to all subjects. The revenue is derived almost entirely from a land tax. Under the zemindary system, established in Bengal, the zemindars, formerly a sort of collectors, have been constituted the actual proprietors of the soil, and have become bound to pay a fixed & permanent assessment, amounting to about one-half of the produce. In Madras, an assessment varying according to the productiveness of the soil, is adopted, under the name of the ryotwary system. The village system, prevalent in the native states, & in some parts of Bengal & the Nerbudda districts, consists in the assessment being collected from the cultivators of the soil through the medium of native village officers, appointed by each community without the direct interference of Government. These rent assessments are very high, and bear hard on the cultivators of the soil; yet the condition of the population under British rule, is greatly ameliorated from that under the unsteady governments, and the incessant wars & conquests of previous periods of their history.

INDIANA, a central state, lies between 37° 45′ & 41° 52′ N. lat., & between 84° 42′ & 87° 49′ W. lon. It has a mean length of 260 & a mean breadth of 140 miles, containing 33,809 square miles. Population in 1800 was 5,641; in 1810, 24,520; in 1820, 147,178; in 1830, 341,582; in 1840, 685,866, & in 1850, 988,416.

Surface, soil, &c.—There are no mountains in this state, but the country bordering on the Ohio is hilly. A range of hills runs parallel with the Ohio from the mouth of the Great Miami to Blue river, alternately approaching to within a few rods, & receding to the distance of 2 miles. Below Blue river the hills cease, & there is an immense tract of level land covered with a heavy growth of timber. Bordering on all the principal streams, except the Ohio, are strips of bottom & prairie land from 3 to 6 miles in width. Remote from the rivers the country is broken, & the soil light. Between the Wabash & Lake Michigan, the country is generally level, interspersed with woodlands, prairies, lakes, & swamps. On the shore of Lake Michigan are sand hills 210 ft. high, back of which are sandy hillocks, with a growth of pine. The prairies bordering on the Wabash have a soil from 2 to 5 feet in depth. Of minerals, iron ore & coal are the most prominent; limestones, marbles, & valuable clays are found. There were in this state in 1850, 5,046,543 acres of land improved, & 7,746,879 of unimproved land in farms; cash value of farms $136,385,173, & the value of implements & machinery $6,704,444.—Live stock, horses, 314,299; asses & mules, 6,599; milch cows, 284,554; working oxen, 40,221; other cattle, 389,891; sheep, 1,122,493; swine, 2,263,776;—value of live stock, $22,478,555; of slaughtered animals, $6,567,935.

Agricultural products, &c.—Wheat, 6,214,458 bushels prod.; rye, 78,792; Ind. corn, 52,964,363; oats, 5,655,014; barley, 45,483; buckwheat, 149,749; peas & beans, 35,773; potatoes, 2,083,337; sweet potatoes, 201,711;—value of products of the orchard, $324,940; produce of market gardens, $72,864;—pounds of butter made, 12,881,535; of cheese, 624,564; maple sugar, 2,921,642; molasses, 180,325 gallons; beeswax & honey, 935,329 pounds; wool, pounds produced, 2,610,287; cotton, 14; flax, 584,609; silk cocoons, 387; hops, 92,796; tobacco, 1,044,620; hay, tons of, 403,230; hemp, 129 tons; clover seeds, 18,320 bush.; other grass seeds, 11,951; flaxseed, 36,888;—& there were made 14,055 gallons of wine;—value of home-made manufactures, $1,631,039.

The Ohio river washes the entire southern border of this state & furnishes great facilities for trade. The Wabash is the largest river in the state, being 500 ms. in length. It rises in Ohio, & passes westwardly & south-westwardly through the state, forming its western boundary for a distance of 120 miles. It is navigable for steamboats to La Fayette, 300 miles, a part of the year. White river, 200 miles long, is its largest branch, & is navigable on its west fork for steamboats to Indianapolis in seasons of floods; it consists of an east fork & a west fork which unite about 30 miles above its junction with the Wabash. The White Water river runs in the eastern part of the state, & enters the Great Miami. Lake Michigan touches this state in the north-west.

The state is divided into 91 counties; the following table gives the number of dwellings, inhabitants, cultivated farms, and manufacturing estabs. in each:—

There were also 131 academies, 6,185 pupils; 4,822 schools, 161,500 scholars; 151 libraries, agg. number of vols. 68,403. School fund (productive & unproductive), $4,998,000. Present available annual revenue, $159,501. There is an institution for the education of the blind at Indianapolis, an institution for the education of the deaf & dumb near Indianapolis, & also a hospital for the insane. The state prison is at Jeffersonville.

The governor is elected by the people for 4 years by a plurality of votes. At every election of governor, a lieutenant-governor is elected, who is president of the senate, & discharges the duties of the governor in case of his death, resignation, or removal. The senators & representatives are apportioned among the counties every six years, according to the number of white male inhabitants over 21 years of age. The members of the house of representatives shall not exceed 100, & are elected for two years; the members of the senate shall not exceed 50, & are elected for four years—one half every two years. The representatives, & one-third of the senators, are elected annually by the people. The legislature meets annually, in December, at Indianapolis. The judges of the supreme & circuit courts are elected for the term of 6 years by the governor, with the consent of the senate; the chief justices of the circuit courts by the legislature, & the associate judges by the people. The right of suffrage is enjoyed by all male citizens over 21 years of age who have resided in the state the six months preceding the election.

Indiana was settled by the French in the latter part of the 17th century, & ceded to Britain in 1763, & at the close of the war of the revolution became a part of the republic. It formed a part of the N.W. territory until 1800; it then, including the present state of Illinois, was erected into the Indiana territory, & was finally admitted into the Union as an independent state, in 1816. The constitution now in force, went into operation in 1851.

INDIANA, county, Pa. Situated centrally toward the W. part of the state. Area, 770 sq. ms. Coal & salt are abundant, & some iron ore is found. The surface is undulating; soil loam mixed with sand, gravel, & clay, and in many parts very fertile. Drained by the head branches of the W. branch of Susquehanna r., & by branches of Connemaugh r. Cap., Indiana. There were in 1850, live stock valued at $704,212; wheat, 209,763 bush. produced; Ind. corn, 213,636; oats, 436,182; potatoes, 51,893; wool, 105,436 pounds; —17 flouring & grist m., 5 saw m., 3 iron foundries, 2 woollen fac.; 4 tanneries, 10 persons emp'd; 2 printing offices, 3 weekly newspapers pub. INDIAN ARCHIPELAGO. [Asiatic Archipelago.]

INDIANAPOLIS, city, & capital of Marion co., and of the state of Indiana. Situated on a fertile and extensive plain on the left bank of White river, which is navigable to this place in time of high water, and at the centre of the railroad system of Indiana. It contains a state house, governor's house, court-house, a U. S. land office, 17 churches,—1 Associate Reformed, 1 Baptist, 1 Christian, 1 Episcopal, 1 Friends, 2 German, 1 Lutheran, 4 Methodist, 2 Presbyterian, 1 Roman Catholic, & 2 African,—a female institute, a county seminary, 2 banks, 6 steam flouring & saw m., 7 printing offices issuing a daily, a tri-weekly, and 7 weekly newspapers. Pop. 1850, 8,091; 1854, 12,000. The national road passes through the place; and the most important roads in the state centre here. The place was originally laid out on a mile square, with streets crossing each other at right angles, & additions have been made to it on the different sides. In the centre is a circular area of several acres, from which 4 streets diverge, crossing the other streets diagonally. In the centre of the circular area was originally a mound, on which stands the governor's house, in a very commanding situation, with a circular street around it, 80 feet wide. The state house is a fine building, 180 feet long, by 80 feet wide, & 45 feet high from the ground to the cornice, with an appropriate dome. It is after the model of the Parthenon at Athens. Indiana Central Medical College, founded in 1849, has 8 professors, 50 students. Lectures commence on the 1st Nov. annually. The State Institution for the blind, & one for Deaf & Dumb, are located here. A bridge crosses White r. here, which cost $25,000, & there are also several viaducts for railroads.

INDIAN OCEAN, Indicum Mare, a vast oceanic basin, separated from the Pacific on the E. by the Asiatic Archipelago & Australia, bounded on S. by a line drawn from the Cape of Good Hope to Bass' Strait, divided from the Atlantic by Africa on W., and enclosed by the countries of Asia on the N. It communicates with the China Sea by the Strait of Malacca, Sunda strait, & the strait of Flores. Principal inlets, the Bay of Bengal, the sea of Oman, the Persian Gulf, & the Red Sea. Chief straits, the channel of Mozambique, & Palk's strait. The most important islands are Madagascar, Mauritius, Bourbon, the Comoro isls., Seychelles, & Socotra, belonging to Africa; the Laccadives, Maldives, Ceylon, the Andaman & Nicobar isls., to Asia. Its principal affls. are, in Asia, the Saluen, Irrawadi, Brahmaputra, Ganges, Godavery, Kistna, Nerbudda, Indus, & the Shat-el-Arab, formed by the junction of the Tigris & Euphrates; in Africa, the Zambeze. The chief sea-ports are Calcutta & Bombay in India, Malacca in the Asiatic Archipelago, Aden, Mokha, & Muscat, in Arabia, Zanzibar, &c., in Africa. Steam-packets are established between the principal ports. The monsoons, or periodical winds, prevail in the N. part of the ocean, blowing from the S.W. between April & October, & S.E. from October to April. Tempests are general at the periods of change; & between lat. 5° & 40° S. violent hurricanes frequently occur.

NOTE.—The great difference in the several aggregates must be accounted for in the extension of the territorial limits of the United States, by the acquisition of Texas, &c., bringing with it an increased Indian population; and, further, in the fact that the report of Mr. McKenney for 1825 does not appear to have embraced the tribes of Missouri valley, the Plains, Oregon, &c., then a part of the United States.

The foregoing table was made up on the 10th of November, 1835, at the request of the Superintendent of the census, by the Commissioner of Indian Affairs. It will be very interesting in showing the past & present location of the Indian tribes which form a portion of the inhabitants of the territory of the United States, though they are not included in any of the census enumerations, except in a few individual cases, which cannot affect the general correctness of the table.

INDIAN (OR WESTERN) TERRITORY.—The Indian Territory is a tract of country west of the settled portions of the United States, which has been set apart by the general government, for the permanent residence of those Indian tribes that have been removed, chiefly from the south-western states of the Union. Here they are secured in governments of their own choice, subject to no other control from the United States, than such as may be necessary to preserve peace on the frontier, & between the several tribes. It is about 600 miles long from S. to N., & from 200 to 600 miles in breadth, from E. to W. It extends to lat. 37° on the N., the states of Missouri & Arkansas on the E., the Red river on the S., & a desert country on the W. This country contains, within the habitable district, an area of 187,171 square miles, or 119,788,440 acres. The country, for about 100 miles west of the eastern boundary, is in general fertile, moderately elevated, & gently undulating, but not hilly, except in the south-eastern parts, where it is traversed by several ranges of hilly & elevated lands. The principal streams are Red r., Canadian, Arkansas, & Neosho rivers, with their tributaries. The largest of these rivers rise in the Rocky mountains, & flow E. into the Missouri & the Mississippi. A considerable portion of the country is prairie, but the margins of the streams are generally covered with wood. Red river & the Arkansas are navigable at certain seasons to within the Indian territory by steamboats. The climate is generally healthy, rather cold in the winter, in the northern part, as it is exposed to an extensive sweep of the west winds, over the vast plains, from the mountainous region; but in the south the winters are mild. All the productions of the United States, of the same latitude, can be here raised; & the grass on the prairies is particularly favorable to the raising of cattle. The country contains coal, some lead & iron ore, & many saline springs, from which a great amount of salt could be manufactured. Although the Indians felt a reluctance to removal, as it was natural they should regret leaving the scenery of their childhood & the graves of their fathers, yet it will be their own fault, if they do not better their condition by their change of residence. To break up the establishments of incipient civilization, & to commence anew, was in itself a great evil; but removed from the demoralizing influence of profligate white men, they are favorably situated for carrying on the work which they had successfully begun.

The Chickasaws & Choctaws, who were kindred tribes on the E. side of the Mississippi, dwell together in the same territory in the W.

The Choctaws, or Chactas, originally settled on the S. of the Chickasaws, between the Mississippi & the Tombigbee, & speaking a dialect of the Mobilian, so nearly resembling that of the Chickasaws, that they almost seemed but one nation, though, unlike the latter, they were allies of the French. They are now located to the E. of the Chickasaws on the same territory on the W. of the Mississippi, bounded on the N. by the Canadian & Arkansas rivers, on the E. by the state of Arkansas, on the S. by Red river, & on the N. by the western territories of the United States; a district of country about 200 m. long, & 150 m. broad. Their numbers are estimated at 17,000. They are extensively engaged in agriculture, & have good houses, & well-enclosed fields. They raise large quantities of Indian corn, & in the southern part of their settlements, considerable cotton. They have nine cotton gins and several grist & saw m. erected on Red river, & other streams, & they possess large stocks of cattle, horses, sheep, & swine. They are governed by a written constitution & laws. The nation is divided into four districts, each of which elects a chief every 4 years. The general council consists of 40 members, chosen by the qualified voters of each district, & assemble on the 1st Monday of October annually. The council passes the laws, the chiefs have a veto power, which can be overruled by a vote of two-thirds of the council. The council chooses its speaker, clerks record the proceedings, & the speaker is addressed, & the business is transacted with the customary forms of legislative proceedings. The council generally continues its session about two weeks, and the members are paid from the funds of the nation, 2 dollars a day. They have a large & commodious council house. The nation is divided into judicial districts, & trial by jury, & appeal to the highest judicial tribunal, are practised. There is no enforcement of the payment of debts—this is left to honor, which is generally observed. The military department of the nation is intrusted to a general, elected by the people, with 32 captains in each district. Spinning & weaving are carried on in many parts of the country, blacksmiths are furnished by the United States; according to treaty stipulations, many of the principals & all the assistants belonging to the Indians. The Choctaws may be regarded as among the most intelligent of the Indian tribes. It is their boast, say the American commissioners of Indian affairs, that in war they never shed the blood of an American. They have frequently entered the military service of the United States. They voluntarily appropriated 18,000 dollars of their annuity from the United States government to the support of schools amongst themselves, & they have recently founded an academical institution in connection with the Baptist mission amongst them, & also a female seminary.

The Chickasaws have settled promiscuously among the Choctaws; & by an agreement between the tribes, the Chickasaws were to have the privilege of forming a district within the Choctaw nation, governed by the same laws, & now form the 4th district, with a proportional representation in the national council. They receive their annuity separately.

The Chickasaws originally inhabited the country bounded by the Ohio on the N., on the E. by a line drawn from a bend in the Cumberland river, to the Muscle shoals of the Tennessee, on the S. by the Choctas territory, or what is now the state of Mississippi, & on the W. by the Mississippi. Their chosen abodes were on the upland country, about the sources of the Yazoo & the Tombigbee, where the grass is verdant in mid-winter, & if the earth be but carelessly opened to receive the kernel of maize, the corn springs abundantly from the fertile soil. The occupants of this happy region were the most intrepid warriors of the S., and proved themselves the faithful & invincible allies of the English in their conflicts with the French. Their entire number is 4,709. Some of the mixed bloods amongst them are intelligent, well-educated men, but as a people the Chickasaws have made less progress in the arts of civilized life than the Choctaws.

The Creeks inhabit a country bounded on the N. & E. by that of the Cherokees; & S. by that of the Choctaws & Chickasaws, from which it is separated by the Canadian river. Their country is fertile, producing Indian corn, beans, potatoes, rice, wheat, pumpkins, melons, &c. Indian corn is their principal crop, and they furnish large quantities to the garrison at Fort Gibson; & as they are industrious, they have supplied themselves with comfortable houses, productive gardens & orchards, & well-tilled fields. They generally associate in towns, & cultivate their lands in common. The government of the U. States has furnished them with a stock of animals, according to treaty stipulations, consisting of cattle & hogs, & from the increase of which they have a sufficient supply. Blacksmiths, wheelwrights, & wagon makers, are furnished by treaty. Their country is not so well watered or healthy as that of their neighbors, but is equally productive. The western winds from the prairies are cold in winter, & they sometimes suffer from drought in summer. They have elected a principal chief, & built a council-house, where representatives of the whole people meet annually to pass laws.

The Creeks, or Muskhogees, formerly inhabited a large part of the states of Georgia and Alabama, or the country bounded northward by about the 34th parallel, & extending from the Mobile river to the Atlantic Ocean. The ridge that divided the Tombigbee, or W. branch of the Mobile, from the Alabama, was the line that separated the Choctaws from the groups of tribes which were united in the Creek Confederacy. Their territory, including all Florida, reached on the N. to the Cherokees, on the N.E. & E. to the country on the Savannah & to the Atlantic. Along the sea, their N. limit seems to have extended almost to Cape Fear. Their population spread over a forefold wider territory, did not exceed that of the Choctaws in number. Their towns were situated on the banks of the beautiful creeks, in which the country abounded; the waters of their bold rivers from the Coosa to the Chattahoochee descended rapidly with a clear currtent through beautiful & fertile regions. They were careful in their agriculture, & before going to war assisted their women to plant. In Florida, they welcomed the Spanish missionaries, & throughout their country derived so much benefit from the arts of civilization, that their numbers soon promised an increase, and being placed between the English of Carolina, the French of Louisiana, and the Spaniards of Florida, & bordering on the Choctaws, & Chicksaws, & the Cherokees, their political importance made them esteemed as the most powerful Indian nation N. of the Gulf of Mexico. They readily gave shelter to fugitives from other tribes, & their speech became so modified, that with radical resemblances, it has the widest departure from its kindred dialects. The Yamassees on the Savannah seem to have been one of their bands, & the Seminoles of Florida are but "wild men," lost from their confederacy, & abandoning agriculture for the chase. Their present number is about 25,000; & they have all removed, according to treaty with the United States government, to the W. of the Mississippi, & are principally located on the Canadian river, and its tributaries.

The Seminoles are considered a constitutent part of the Creek nation, speaking the same language, & are closely assimilated. They are by agreement located with the Creeks, between the Arkansas & the Deep Fork of the Canadian river, above the Cherokee settlement. They have made some improvements, and raised some corn; but in general are averse to labor. They have a blacksmith, under treaty stipulations. They are well satisfied with their country. The slaves that they have been permitted to bring into the country, have been an occasion of difficulty.

The country assigned to the Cherokees, is N. & E. of that assigned to the Creeks. They have advanced further in civilization than the other tribes. They have a fine agricultural country, comfortable houses, & well-cultivated farms, producing in abundance the necessaries of life; & they raise large stocks of cattle & many fine horses, for which their extensive prairies enable them abundantly to provide. They have but few mills, as their streams, at certain seasons, fail. Salt springs exist, & salt is extensively manufactured.

The Cherokees (in their own language Tsulakees, Tsalakees, or Tsalagis) were once a numerous & powerful tribe of Indians, the mountaineers of aboriginal America. Their territories originally comprised the upper valley of the Tennessee river, as far W. as Muscle Shoals, & the high lands of Carolina, Georgia, & Alabama, a tract containing more than 35,000,000 acres, & forming the most picturesque & salubrious region E. of the Mississippi. "Their homes," says Bancroft, "were encircled by blue hills rising beyond hills of which the lofty peaks would kindle with the early light, & the overshadowing ridges envelope the valleys like a mass of clouds." There the rocky cliffs rising in naked grandeur, defy the lightning & mock the loudest peals of the thunder storm; there the gentler slopes are covered with magnolias, & flowering forest-trees decorated with roving climbers, & ring with the perpetual note of the whip-poor-will; there the wholesome water gushes profusely from the earth in transparent springs. Snow-white cascades glitter on the hill sides, & the rivers shallow, but pleasant to the eye, rush through the narrow vales which the abundant strawberry crimsons, & coppices of rhododendron & flaming azalea adorn. At the fall of the leaf, the fruit of the hickory & the chesnut is thickly strewn on the ground. The fertile soil teems with luxuriant herbage on which the roebuck fattens; the vivifying breeze is laden with fragrance, & day-break is ever welcomed by the shrill cries of the social night-hawk, & the liquid carrols of the mocking bird. Through this lovely region were scattered the little villages of the Cherokees, nearly fifty in number, each consisting of but a few cabins, erected where the bend in the mountain stream offered at once a defence & a strip of alluvial soil for culture. Their towns were always by the side of some creek or river, & they loved their native land, above all they loved its rivers—the Keowee, the Tugeloo, the Flint, & the beautiful branches of the Tennessee. Running waters inviting to the bath, tempting to the angler, alluring wild fowl, were necessary to their paradise. Their language, like that of the Iroquois, abounds in vowels, & is destitute of the labials. Its organization has a common character, but etymology has not yet been able to discover conclusive analogies between the roots of words. The "beloved" people of the Cherokees were a nation by themselves. Who can say for how many centuries, safe in their undiscovered fastnesses, they had decked their war chiefs with the feathers of the eagle's tail, & listened to the counsels of their "old beloved men?" Who can tell how often the waves of barbarous migrations may have broken harmlessly against their cliffs, where nature was the strong ally of the defenders of their land? Between the close of the revolutionary war & the year 1820, the Cherokees sold to the United States at different times more than three-fourths of their possessions, & on the 23d of May, 1836, a treaty was made with them, by which they agreed for 5,000,000 dollars to remove W. of the Mississippi, where the undisturbed possession of 7,800,000 acres of land, with the right of self-government, was guaranteed them for ever. In 1825, the number of the Cherokees of pure & mixed blood E. of the Mississippi was 13,563, & 147 white men & 73 white women had intermarried with them, & were residing among them. They also held 1,277 negro slaves. In 1853, their number was 19,130. The Cherokees have made considerable progress in agriculture, & even in literature & the arts of civilized life. As far back as 1824 they adopted written laws, & they were the first aboriginal natives W. of the Mississippi that did so. A well-organized system of government has been established amongst them, & their territory is divided into 8 districts. The executive consists of a principal chief & assistants, with 3 executive counsellors, all elected by the legislative body. The legislature consists of two bodies, a national committee of 16 members, 2 from each district, & a national council of 24 members, 3 from each district, & meet annually at the council house at Tahlequah. The members are chosen for the term of two years, by the qualified electors in their several districts. These electors include all the free male citizens who have attained the age of 18 years, except persons of African origin. The rules respecting the nature & powers of the legislature in general, are similar to those of several states of the Union. Each of the two bodies has a negative on the other, & together they are styled the General Council of the Cherokee Nation. The chief & his assistants hold their offices for four years, the executive counsellors are chosen annually. The judiciary consists of a supreme court, & of circuit & district courts. The members of the supreme court hold their offices for four years. They have also a public treasury, a printing office, & a newspaper, the Cherokee Phœnix, commenced in February, 1828, under the editorship of a Cherokee. The press is owned & directed by the Cherokee government. They have founts of type in the Cherokee character, & the Gospel of Matthew, the Acts of the Apostles, & a collection of hymns translated by one of the missionaries, have been printed; & they have an Almanac (1854) printed in this character. Intermarriages have in many instances taken place between them & the whites in their neighborhood, and many of the half breeds have large plantations, & carry on agriculture with more spirit than the full blooded. There are very different degrees of improvement among the members of the tribe. Some families have risen to a level with the white population, while the improvement of others has but commenced. In general, those of mixed blood are in advance of the full-blooded Indians. Not less than a quarter of the people are probably in a greater or less degree mixed blood. The dress of most of the Cherokees is substantially the same as that of the whites around them. A great part of their clothing is manufactured by themselves, though not a little is of the fabrics of the northern & eastern states, comprised of calicoes, broadcloth, & silk. Many families raise their own cotton, out of which the women make substantial cloth. Cultivation by the plough is almost universal, most families raise enough to supply their own wants, & many have considerable quantities of corn for sale. None of them depend in any considerable degree on game for their support. The Cherokees live chiefly in villages, & their dwellings are mostly comfortable log cabins, with chimneys, and generally floored. Many of their houses are pretty buildings of two stories, some are even handsome dwellings of painted wood or brick. Superstition is rapidly declining, & the ancient traditions are fading from memory, so that it is difficult to collect them. Conjuring, however, is still practised to a considerable extent. In regard to intemperance, the Cherokees would not suffer by a comparison with the white population around them. The laws rigorously exclude intoxicating liquors from all public assemblies, & otherwise restrict their use. They have among them temperance societies on the principal of entire abstinence, & the civil officers enforce the laws against the introduction of ardent spirits, & fine transgressors.

The Osages are an indigenous tribe, occupying a territory N. of the Cherokees. The United States have labored, by supplying them with agricultural implements, & stock animals, & erecting mills, & supplying blacksmiths, to persuade them to a settled life, & to industrious habits, which would secure in abundance, in their fertile country, the comforts of life. But they are averse to these things, &, in general, prefer their wandering habits; & as the buffaloes are retreating to the west of their lands, they frequently kill the cattle of their neighbors. A few of these, however, are of a different mind; & their industry, & the comforts which it will secure, may persuade their brethren to follow their example. The Osages are among the least civilized of the Indians in the territory, & are not inclined to education.

The Shawnees occupy the country between the Osage & Kansas rivers, & are an industrious, frugal, & agricultural people, & have good farms, producing in abundance, Indian corn, wheat, oats, & a variety of culinary vegetables; & they raise stocks of horses, cattle, & hogs. They have a blacksmith, furnished by treaty stipulation, & a grist & saw mill. The Senecas are mingled with them. The Methodists & Baptists have missionary stations among them, & the latter have a printing press.

West of the Missouri, & N. of the Shawnees, are the Iowaways. They resemble the Shawnees, & have Methodist & Baptist missions among them.

The Kansas are an indigenous tribe between the Shawnees & the Delawares; & like the generality of those tribes, are indolent & poor.

The Pawnees, the Omahaws, & the Ottoes, who inhabit the country about the Platte river, are native tribes, who retain much of their original habits, & are little advanced in civilization, but are beginning to desire it.—Note.—All tribes located north of 37° N. lat., are, by act of Congress (1854), in Kansas or Nebraska Territory.

INDIAN TOWN, v., King William co., Va. It is situated on the left bank of the Pamunkey river, and contains the remnant of the Pamunkey tribe of Indians, consisting of about 100 souls. There is also a small settlement of the same name in Southampton co., containing the remnant of the once powerful Nottoway tribe.

INDIES (EAST), a collective name given to the peninsulas of Hither & Further India, & the Asiatic Archipelago. [HINDOSTAN, INDIA.]

INDIES (WEST). [WEST INDIES. COLOMBIAN ARCH.]

INDIGHIRKA, a river of E. Siberia, gov. Yakutsk, rises in the Yabloni mountains, & after a N. course, estimated at 750 m., joins the Arctic Ocean, in lat. 71° N., lon. 150° E., by an estuary containing numerous isls. It receives many affls., but the region it traverses is almost wholly a frozen desert, with a few villages.

INDIGO HEAD, p. o., Coffee co., Ala.

INDIO, a river of the isthmus Panama, N. Granada, unites with the Pacora to form a considerable stream, which enters the Pacific, E Panama. Its shores abound with fine timber.

INDJE-KARA-SU, Haliacmon, a river of European Turkey, Macedonia, enters the Gulf of Salonica, 18 m. S.W. Salonica. Length 110 m.

INDJIGHIZ, a town of European Turkey, Rumili, 33 m. W.N.W. Constantinople. It has some mineral baths & remains of ancient structures.

INDJIH (CAPE, Lepe), the most N. point of Asia Minor, 13 m. N.W. Sinope.

INDOO-CHINA, S. Asia. [MALAY PENINSULA.]

INDORE DOMINION, a state of Central Hindostan, enclosed by the Gwalior dom., & territory of the Bombay presid., & intersected, E. to W., by the Nerbuddah river. Area nearly 4,250 sq. m. Besides the cap. Indore, it comprises the towns Mhow, Mahidpoor, Mandoo, Mheysur, and Baug. It furnishes to the British Indian forces 3,000 men.—Indore, the cap., is situated on a wooded table land, elevation nearly 2,000 feet, & 33 m. S. Oojein. Lat. 22° 22′ N., lon. 75° 50′ E. It has been wholly built within the present century, & has some spacious streets. The massive granite palace of its Rajah is its only edifice of importance.

INDRAGHIRI, a navigable river of Sumatra, enters the ocean on its E. coast, in lat. 0° 32′ S., lon. 102° E. On it is a town of same name. The Dutch settlement & environs had in 1849 a pop. of 50,000.

INDRAMAYO, a cape, river, and town of Java, the town near the mouth of the river, which enters the sea on its N. coast, near the cape, 90 m. E. Batavia.

INDRAPURA, or INDRAPOOR, a point, river, town, state, & volcano of Sumatra, the town near the S.W. coast, 150 m. N.W. Bencoolen. Indrapura point is in lat. 2° 5′ S., lon. 105° 27′ E., & N. of it is a bay in which are the Indrapoor islands.

INDRE, a riv. of France, deps. Indre & Indre-et-Loire, joins the Loire, 18 m. W.S.W. Tours, after a N.W. course of 115 m. On it are the towns La Châtre, Châteauroux, Chatillon, & Loches, from which last it is navigable to the Loire, 45 m.

INDRE, a dep. of N.W. France, formed of part of the old prov. Berri, enclosed by the deps. Loire-et-Cher & Indre-et-Loire, Vienne, H. Vienne, Creuse, Cher. Area, 2,749 sq. m. Pop. 1851, 271,938. Surface uniformly level. Principal rivers, the Indre and Creuse. More corn & wine are raised than required for home consumption; though much of the soil is barren & swampy. Climate generally mild and temperate. Sheep are numerous, & many oxen & poultry are fattened here for the Paris markets. This dep. furnishes the best lithographic stones in France, gunflints, iron and iron goods, earthenwares, & cutlery at Châteauroux. Woollen & cotton cloths, & yarn, leather, tiles, & parchment, are among the chief products, & are exported to double the value of the imports. Indre is divided into the 4 arronds., Châteauroux, Issoudun, La Châtre, & Le Blanc.

INDRE-ET-LOIRE, a dep. in the N.W. of France, formed chiefly of the old prov. of Touraine, comprising a region on both sides of the Loire, enclosed by the deps. Sarthe, Maine-et-Loire, Vienne, Indre, & Loire-et-Cher. Area, 2,400 sq. m. Pop. 1851, 315,641. Climate mild. Surface level, and near the Loire very fertile, elsewhere poor, & often marshy. The Cher, Indre, & Vienne rivers water its southern portion. Agriculture has latterly improved, and the produce in corn is now more than adequate to home consumption. The quantity of wine is double that annually consumed, & the surplus is mostly sent to Paris & into Belgium. The dep. furnishes excellent lithographic stone, pipe & potters' clay, & contains an immense mound of petrified shells, which are used as manure. Hemp, liquorice, anniseed, truffles, fruits, &c., are raised in considerable quantities, the produce of the dep. being chiefly agricultural. The culture of silk is increasing, as are the silk, woollen, & leather manufs of Tours. Other principal manufactures are of files and rasps at Amboise, iron wares, red lead, & pottery, and near Montbazon is a national gunpowder factory and nitre refinery. The dep. is divided into the 3 arronds. of Tours, the cap., Chinon, & Loches.

INDRET, a small isl. of France, dep. Loire-Inf., formed by the Loire, 5 m. W. Nantes. The French government lately founded an establishment here for building steam-boats, in which, in 1840, 900 workmen were employed.

INDUS (Sanscrit Sindhu the sea), one of the great rivs. of S. Asia, forming the W. boundary of Hindostan, rises in Tibet, on the N. side of Kailas mountain (Himalaya), in lat. 31° 20′ N., lon. 81° 15′ E., near the sources of the Sutleje. It flows N.W. for about 120 m., where it is joined by the Gartope. The conjoint stream now breaks through the Himalaya; & thenceforth it has a S.W. course, separating the Punjab dom. from Afghanistan, & traversing Scinde throughout to its mouths in the Indian Ocean, between lat. 23° and 25° N., & lon. 67° 30′ & 69° E. Total course estimated at 1,650 m. Its affls., though not numerous, are important. N. of the Himalaya, it receives the Gartope, Sinh-kha-bab, Zanskar, & Shy-yok rivers. S. of the mountains, the Cabool river enters it, and, in lat. 28° 55′ N., lon. 70° 28′ E., 470 m. from the ocean, it is joined from the N.E. by the Punjnud, which brings to it the united streams of the Punjab, or "five rivers," the Sutlej (Hesidrus), with the Beas (Hyphasis), the Chenab (Acesines), the Ravee (Hydraotes), & the Jhylum (Hydaspes). Below this it has no tributary of much size, but repeatedly subdivides, giving off lateral streams, the principal being the Fulailee, and Narra branches; & at Tricoal, lat. 25° 9′, lon. 68° 21′ E., the Delta commences, the chief arms of which are the Buggaur, Sata, & Pinyaree. The Indus enters the sea by the Pittee, Hujamree, Khediwaree, Kuhiwaree, Sir, & Koree mouths. On the banks of the Indus are the towns Moor, Leh, Iskardo, Attock, Kala-Bagh, Dera Ismael Khan, Dera-Ghazee-Khan, Bukkur, Leia, Mittun-Cote, Koree-Bukkur, Sukkur, Sepwan, Hyderabad, Meeanee, Tattah, Garra, Bander-Vikkur, and at its N. entrance Kurachee. Its source is supposed to be 18,000 feet above the sea, its bed at Leh, 10,000 feet, & at Attock, 940 m. from its mouth, it is 1,000 feet above the ocean level, 800 feet across, 60 feet in depth, & has a current of 6 m. an hour. Below that point it runs with great velocity, mostly between high cliffs, as far as Kala-Bagh, after which its course is through a level country, with a breadth usually varying from ½ m. to upwards of 1 m., & an average velocity of from 2 to 3 m. an hour. During the season when it is lowest, tides are perceptible upward to about 25 m. below Tattah, or 75 m. from the ocean. Mean ann. discharge of water supposed to be 150,212,079,642 tons, a large proportion of its waters being consumed in irrigation & evaporation. The Indus is navigable from the sea as high as the influx of the Cabool river, near Attock, at 942 m. from the sea, & its tributaries are mostly so to the foot of the mntns., about 700 m.; but the channel is so encumbered by shifting banks, as to be only adapted for steamers, & vessels of comparatively small draft. The gavial, or long-snouted alligator, is numerous in the river, & the common alligator is found in its lagoons. The bolun, a cetacean, is also abundant. Fish, especially the pulla, a species of carp, are very abundant, & form a chief article of food for the natives. The country immediately adjacent to its banks, in its Delta especially, is of high fertility; but at no great distance on either side, this region is flanked by a bare desert; & wood fuel is everywhere so scarce, that there is little immediate prospect of making the Indus a high route for steam navigation, unless the coal recently discovered near it in the Punjab & Afghanistan should prove to be suitable in quality, & in adequate quantity for the undertaking.

Federal representative pop. 192,214.

The counties formed since 1850 are as follows:—Adair, Adams, Audubon, Bancroft, Brewer, Buena Vista, Buncombe, Butler, Calhoun, Carroll, Cass, Cerro Gorda, Cherokee, Chickasaw, Clay, Crawford, Dickinson, Emmitt, Floyd, Franklin, Greene, Guthrie, Grundy, Hancock, Hardin, Harrison, Howard, Humboldt, Ida, Kossuth, Manona, Mills, Mitchell, Montgomery, O'Brien, Osceola, Palo Alto, Plymouth, Pocahontas, Sac, Shelby, Sioux, Union, Wahkoa, Webster, Winnebago, Woodbury, Worth, & Wright.

The face of the country is moderately uneven, without any mountains or high hills. There is a tract of elevated table land which extends through a considerable part of the state, dividing the waters which fall into the Mississippi from those which fall into the Missouri. The margins of the rivers & creeks extending back from one to ten miles, are generally covered with timber, while beyond this the country is an open prairie without trees. By the frequent alternations of these two descriptions of land, the country is greatly diversified; the prairies cover nearly three-fourths of the surface of the state, & although they are destitute of trees, present a varied aspect—some have a level & others a rolling surface; some are covered with a rich coat of grass, well suited for grazing; in others, this is interspersed with hazle thickets & sassafras shrubs, & in season, superbly decorated with flowers. The soil both on the bottom & prairie land, is generally good, consisting of a deep black mould, intermingled in the prairies with a sandy loam, & sometimes with red clay & gravel. In the N.E. part of the state are rich lead mines, continuous of those of Illinois & Wisconsin; there is an extensive coal-field in the Des Moines valley, & iron ore is found throughout the state, & some copper also. Limestone forms the sub-stratum, & a beautiful bird's-eye marble is quarried near Iowa city.

There were in this state in 1850, 824,682 acres of land improved, & 1,911,382 of unimproved land in farms; cash value of farms, $16,657,567, & the value of implements & machinery, $1,172,869. Live stock, —horses, 38,536; asses & mules, 754; milch cows, 45,704; working oxen, 21,892; other cattle, 69,025; sheep, 149,960; swine, 323,247;—value of live stock, $3,689,275; of slaughtered animals, $821,164.

Agricultural products, &c.—Wheat, 1,530,581 bushels produced; rye, 19,916; Ind. corn, 8,656,799; oats, 1,524,345; barley, 25,093; buckwheat, 52,516; peas & beans, 4,775; potatoes, 276,120; sweet potatoes, 6,243; rice, 500 pounds;—value of products of the orchard, $8,434; produce of market gardens, $8,848; —pounds of butter made, 2,171,188; of cheese, 209,-840; maple sugar, 78,407; molasses, 3,162 gallons; beeswax & honey, 321,711 pounds; wool, 373,898 produced; flax, 62,660; silk cocoons, 246; hops, 8,242; tobacco, 6,041; hay, tons of, 89,055; clover seeds, 342 bushels; other grass seeds, 2,096; flax-seed, 1,959; & were made 420 gallons of wine;—value of home-made manufactures, $221,292.

The Mississippi borders this state for its whole length on the east, & is navigable in time of high water, for steamboats, to the mouth of the St. Peter's. The Des Moines runs in the southern part of the state, & forming a part of the south-west boundary, enters the Mississippi. In high water, it is navigable for steamboats 100 miles, & for keel boats at all times. Checauque or Skunk river, after a course of 150 miles, enters the Mississippi. Iowa river is 300 miles long, & is navigable for steamboats 12 miles from its entrance into the Mississippi, & in high water for small steamboats to Iowa city. Red Cedar river, the main branch of the Iowa, is navigable for keel boats in high water, 100 miles above its junction. The Wapsipinecon has a winding & rapid course, 200 miles to its entrance into the Mississippi. The Makoqueta bounds the mineral region on the south, & enters the Mississippi, furnishing, in its course, the best water power in the state. Turkey river, after a course of 150 ms., enters the Mississippi; it is not navigable. Sioux r. enters the Missouri, & forms part of the W. boundary.

Manufactures, &c.—There were in this state in 1850, 1 woollen factory, with a capital invested of $10,000, employing 7 males; manufacturing 14,000 yards of cloth, valued at $13,000; 3 establishments, with a capital of $5,500, employing 17 persons; & making 71 tons of castings, &c., valued at $8,500;—86 flouring & grist mills, 144 saw mills, 14 tanneries; 32 printing offices, 29 newspapers—2 tri-weekly, 25 weekly, & 2 monthly publications. Capital invested in manufac., $1,292,875; value of manufactured articles, $3,553,808. There were in January, 1854, 2 railroads; 480 miles of which were in course of construction.

The principal places in the state are Iowa City, the capital, Burlington, Dubuque, Bloomington, Keokuk.

Religion, &c.—There were in the state in 1850, 193 churches, viz., 20 Baptist, 10 Christian, 14 Congregational, 5 Episcopal, 5 Friends, 1 German Reformed, 4 Lutheran, 71 Methodist, 2 Moravian, 38 Presbyterian, 18 Roman Catholic, 4 Union, & 1 Universalist. Total value of church property, $177,425.

Education, &c.—There were in this state in 1850, 2 colleges with 600 students (& 1854, 5 colleges, viz., The Iowa State University at Iowa city, Des Moines college, Des Moines; a college for females, Des Moines; the Baptist University at Burlington, Alexander College at Dubuque, the Medical Department of the State University at Keokuk); 31 academies, 1,051 pupils, & 74 common schools, 29,616 scholars; school fund, about $500,000 annually;—32 libraries, 5,790 vols.

Government, &c.—The governor is elected for four years by a plurality of votes; he must be a citizen of the United States, & have resided 2 years next preceding his election within the state, & have attained the age of 30 years. The legislative authority is vested in a senate & house of representatives, which meet biennially on the 1st Monday in January. Representatives (not to exceed 72) are chosen for 2 years; they must be free white citizens of the United States, & have attained the age of 21 years; have resided within the state one year next preceding the election, & thirty days within the county or district for which they may be elected. Senators (not to exceed 36 in number) are chosen for four years; they must be 25 years of age, & possess the same qualifications as representatives. The judicial power is vested in a supreme court, district courts, & such other inferior courts as the legislature may establish. Judges of the supreme court are elected by the legislature, & hold their office for six years. Every white male citizen of the United States, 21 years of age, who shall have resided within the state six months next preceding the election, and twenty days in the county in which he claims to vote, enjoys the right of suffrage.

Iowa was included in the Louisiana purchase of 1803. The first settlement was made about 1686, by a few French at Dubuque. It formed a part of the Missouri territory from 1804 to 1821, when it was included in the Michigan territory, & subsequently in Wisconsin territory. In 1832, a portion of the country was purchased of the Indians, & in 1833, began to be settled by white emigrants. In 1838 it was made a territory, including all of Minnesota west of the Mississippi r. It was admitted into the Union (with the boundaries as at present constituted), Dec., 1846.

IOWA CITY, city, capital of Johnson co. & of the state of Iowa, 33 W. Bloomington, 86 S.S.W. Dubuque, 75 N. by W. Burlington, 1,480 W. Situated on the lt. b. of Iowa r., which is navigable for boats to this place at all stages of the water. The water of the r. is clear & pure, the banks are high & dry, & the neighborhood furnishes fine building stone & excellent timber. This place was the hunting ground of the Indian until 1839. The first plateau from the r., half a mile long & 100 yds. wide, is devoted to a public promenade. The second elevation is about 12, & the third about 30 feet above the promenade. Upon the brow of the last runs Capitol-st., 120 feet wide, & is met at right angles by Iowa avenue, of equal width. The capitol, on Capitol-st., fronting Iowa avenue, is of Grecian-Doric architecture, 120 feet long by 60 feet wide, & 2 stories high above the basement. It is surmounted by a dome resting on 22 Corinthian columns. Its situation is commanding. Besides this, are a court house, a U. S. land office, the building of the university of Iowa (in progress), 5 churches,—1 Baptist, 1 Episcopal, 1 Methodist, 1 Presbyterian, & 1 Roman Catholic,—several stores, & in 1850, 1,250 inhabitants: in 1854, 2,000. IRELAND, p. o., Lewis co., Va.

IRELAND, Erin, Ierne, Hibernia, an island, forming a portion of the British empire, in the N. Atlantic, between lat. 51° 26′ & 55° 21′ N., & lon. 5° 20′ & 10° 26′ W., separated W.ward from Great Britain by the Irish Sea & St. George channel. Length N. to S., 283 miles; greatest breadth 197 miles. Area, 32,509¾ sq. miles.

Ireland is of an oblong form, with a waved continuous outline on the E. coast, but deeply indented by numerous inlets on its other sides, with rock-bound coasts N. & W. Surface mostly level or undulating. Most of its mountains, as the Wicklow and Mourne mountains, those of Donegal, Mayo, Galway, & Kerry, are in isolated groups toward the coasts & extremities of the island, surrounding a central plain, of limestone formation, comprising a large extent of bog-land, and traversed only by a few low hill ranges & the Sliebh-loom mountains. M'Gillicuddy Reeks, in Kerry, of which Garran Tual is the highest summit in Ireland, rises to 3,414 feet above the sea. Granite, flanked by Silurian strata, forms the Wicklow range of mountains on the E. coast. The same primary strata prevail in the Mourne mountains, & an extensive trap formation in Antrim of 800 sq. miles, is succeeded by clay slate on the west. Granite again appears in the Galway mountains, and the old red sandstone extensively prevail in Munster. The great plain in the centre is formed of mountain limestone, & contains 7 coal districts, the Leinster, or Castlecomer, the Sleeve Aadain Tipperary, the Munster, Loch Allan, Monaghan, and Tyrone, besides a small coal field in co. Antrim. The coal raised S. of Dublin is anthracite, that in the N. is bituminous. Copper & lead are found in the Silurian & mountain limestone. The lower chalk and greensand formations partially prevail, but no tertiary beds. Ireland is well watered. Principal rivers, the Shannon, Barrow, Blackwater, Suir, Nore, Bann, Foyle, Boyne, Slaney, Liffey, Bandon, & Erne. Principal lakes, Neagh, Erne in Ulster, loughs Allen, Corrib, Mask, & Deirgeash in Connaught, & the famed lakes of Killarney, in Munster, near the S.W. extremity of the island. The aggregate surface of these lakes is estimated at 336 sq. m. Loughs Strangford, Belfast, Foyle, & Swilly, on the N. & N.E. coasts, are inlets of the sea. Other principal inlets are Dundrum, Carlingford, Dundalk, & Dublin bays on the E., & Bantry, Dunmanus, Dingle, Tralee, Galway, Clew, Blacksod, Killala, Sligo, & Donegal bays, with the estuaries of the Shannon & Kenmare rivers, on the W. coast. Ireland is much indented by the sea, no locality being above 50 m. from its shores, & this conduces to the general mildness of its climate. Mean winter temp. 39°.9, mean summer 60°.5; mean of year 49°.6 Fahr. Ann. fall of rain 30 to 40 inches, the greatest fall being in the S. & S.W. W. winds prevail for 9 months in the year. The broad leaved myrtle grows luxuriantly in some S. counties, & the arbutus unedo, menziesia, and other plants of S. Europe flourish; while Alpine plants, of the extreme north of Europe, are also found on some of the mountains. Of the 20,000,000 acres of land there were, in 1851, 14,802,581 of arable land, and 5,898,951 acres under crops. Ireland is more fitted for cattle rearing than an agricultural country; yet of late, owing to the rapid increase of population, and other causes, much land that was formerly in pasture has been brought under culture for corn, potatoes, & other crops adapted for human nutriment; & it has been estimated that 4-5ths of the population directly depend for subsistence & employment on the soil. Farms are generally very small, few extend to 40 acres, & mostly vary from 5 to 15 acres in the E. & N. In 1851, out of 608,066 holders of land, 37,728 holdings were less than 1 acre; above 1 acre to 5 acres, 88,083; above 5 acres to 15 acres, 191,854; above 15 to 30 acres, 141,311; above 30 acres, 149,090. A few estates are in large farms, & these are the portions of the country in which there is the least amount of national pauperism. Oats, wheat, & barley, are the principal crops, next to potatoes, which have long formed the staple crop and food of the Irish peasantry, till the failure of these crops in 1845-6-7, when a government grant of 10,350,000*l.* was found necessary to prevent starvation.

About 9-10th of the lands were confiscated by the government of Cromwell & William III., & bestowed on English proprietors, by whose descendants the bulk of Irish property is still possessed.

The following table shows the extent of land under each description of crop, and the amount of produce from 1847 to 1851:—

* The Valuation of Dublin City has not been made under the superintendence of Mr. Griffith, but by Mr. McMicken, valuator to the North and South Dublin Poor Law Unions.

† The Tenement Valuation of some Baronies in the Counties of Cork and Kerry not yet quite completed.

Value of land & buildings is between 11,000,000*l.* & 12,000,000*l.* In 1852, 13,277 vessels, manned by 58,822 persons, were employed in the fisheries around the coasts, where herrings, pilchards, cod, ling, & hake, are among the more plentiful kinds taken, and in the estuaries, where salmon & eels are abundant; but the salt fish consumed in the country is still imported chiefly from Scotland, & other places. Mineral products comprise marble, of the finest quality, coal, copper, the ore of which is mostly sent to Wales to be smelted, lead, antimony, manganese, fullers' earth, slate, and peat from the bogs, which forms the principal fuel, & is of high importance, owing to the general deficiency of timber. Manufs. consist of paper, glass, tobacco, & especially linen goods, the chief seat of which latter is Ulster; & in that prov. linens, to the estimated value of 4,000,000*l.* annually, are made chiefly in the dwellings of the rural population, and disposed of to the merchants of Belfast, & other large towns. Ireland exports 100,000,000 yards of woven linen & flax goods annually, after supplying the home demand. The malt trade & distilling of whiskey are extensively carried on. The wool produced in Ireland has been estimated to amount in annual value to 300,000*l.*, & coarse woollen stuffs are made in the centre of the country, besides mixed stuffs & silks in Dublin, Waterford, & other principal cities. In 1851 there were in all 91 mills, 69 for flax, 11 for woollens, and 11 for cotton, employing 24,725 persons, & steam power equivalent to that of 2,646 horses, & water power to that of 1,886 horses. The conversion of grain into flour and meal has latterly become an extensive business in Ireland; the principal exports from which country are its raw produce, wheat, oats, flour, butter, bacon, beef, eggs, wool, flax, ore, & spirits. Imports comprise coal & culm, fish, salt, woollen and cotton yarn, & fabrics, with colonial produce. Value of exports amount to about 20,000,000*l.* annually, of imports 17,000,000*l.*, mostly to & from Liverpool, Bristol, Glasgow, & other British ports. The trade with foreign countries is comparatively inconsiderable. In 1851, 2,088 sailing vessels, aggregate burden 223,354 tons, & 125 steam vessels, aggregate burden 28,557 tons, belonged to Ireland. Principal commercial ports are Dublin, Belfast, Cork, Limerick, Waterford, and Londonderry. The Grand & Royal canals intersect Ireland throughout from E. to W., & respectively connect Dublin with Ballinasloe & Tarmonberry, on the Shannon. The number of miles of railroad completed in 1852 was 700, and over 100 miles in course of construction. The total number of miles authorized to be constructed by the legislature up to June, 1851, was 1,517. Ireland has, since 1800, been represented in the British House of Lords by 28 temporal & 4 spiritual peers; peers elected for life, who take office in rotation; and since the Reform act, in the H. of C., by 105 members, 2 elected by each co., 2 by each of the cities Dublin, Cork, Limerick, & Waterford, the towns Belfast and Galway, & Trinity College, Dublin; & 1 by each of 25 other bors. Total reg. electors 1851, 163,546, viz., 135,245 in counties, & 28,301 in cities & boroughs. The electoral franchise rests with much the same classes as in England; in bors., both the parl. & municipal right of voting is in 8*l.* householders, resident within 7 m.; in counties occupiers of tenements rated at 12*l.* and upwards: & owners of estates rated at 5*l.* & upwards. The local government is vested in a Lord-Lieutenant, assisted by the Secretary for Ireland, & a privy council, nominated by the crown, & indefinite in number, the Bishop of Meath being always one, ex officio. The judicial power is with the Lord Chancellor, the master of the rolls, & 12 circuit-judges. Each county has a Lord-Lieutenant, aided by an indefinite number of deputy-lieutenants, & a police force appointed by the crown. Religious denominations in 1834 were Roman Catholics, 6,427,712; Established church, 852,064; Presbyterians, 642,356; other sects, 21,808. The Protestants are almost confined to Ulster, & parts of Leinster; but the Protestant church has two archbishoprics (Armagh & Dublin) and 10 bishoprics. Revenue of ecclesiastical com's. 1852, 122,372*l.* The Roman Catholic Church (unendowed by law) has 4 archbishoprics & 25 bishoprics. The institutions for instruction are the University of Dublin, Trinity College, the Queen's Colleges of Belfast, Cork, & Galway, in connection with the Queen's University in Ireland (estab. 1850), the College of St. Columbia, near Dublin, the Belfast Academical Institution, the Roman Catholic College of St. Patrick, Maynooth, St. Jarlath's, Tuam, St. Patrick's, Carlow, Armagh, and Thurles, St. Kyran's, Kilkenny, Clongoves, Clare, and the Missionary College of All-Hallows, Drumcondra, near Dublin; endowed classical schools, endowed mercantile schools, parochial schools, national educational schools, Kildare-place schools, church educational schools, Christian Brothers' schools, and Sunday schools. The national schools, aided by parl. grants in 1851 of 164,577*l.*, amounted in 1852 to 4,795, attended by 524,401 children. The original inhabitants of the island were the Celts, who have been intermixed in the south with the Milesian tribes from Spain; in the maritime districts of the east & south-east with the Danes, who were followed by the Anglo-Normans; & in the north with the Scotch, who settled there in great numbers in the reign of James I. Subsequently, small colonies of French emigrants settled in Dublin, the Queen's county, & Lisburn in Antrim; and some Germans, called Palatines, in Tipperary. The Erse, a dialect of the Celtic, is still the prevailing language. Their dark complexion, & smaller and more slender form of body, distinguish them from the Saxon, as well as their more volatile temperament, their improvidence, their deficiency in personal enterprise and perseverence, & their consequent poverty. In the year 432, Christianity was introduced into Ireland by St. Patrick. From the 8th to the 12th century, the country was the scene of perpetual warfare between the petty kings & their chiefs. In 1174, Henry VII. of England conquered the country, & portioned it out among his Anglo-Norman followers. In the reign of King John the division into counties took place, and English laws & customs were partially introduced. But the powerful barons continued to resist the government of Henry VII., James I., & Elizabeth, with repeated outbreaks & rebellions. The most memorable of these were in 1641, 1689, & 1798. In 1800 the union with Ireland & England took place. In 1829 the Roman Catholic emancipation act was passed, in 1832 the Irish reform bill, in 1838 the poor law bill. In 1844 the Irish repeal agitation was at its height; in 1847 a famine took place from the failure of the potatoe crop; & in 1848 an insurrection of the populace took place, but was speedily put down. The standing army in Ireland in 1851 amounted to 19,894 men. Revenue of Ireland in 1850 amounted to 4,000,682*l.*; expenses, 6,524,605*l.* Amount provided from the British exchequer to make good the annual charge for Ireland same year, 2,523,923*l.*

The decrease of the population in Ireland, consequent on the calamities of the last few years, has effected more than almost anything else in bringing the result of those calamities forcibly before the mind. Taking periods of ten years, the Census Commissioners have found the following numbers: 1811, 5,937,856; 1821, 6,801,827; 1831, 7,767,401; 1841, 8,175,124; 1851, 6,661,830. A steady increase until the last, when a falling-off, amounting to 1,513,294, is observable. This decrease was 15¼ per cent. in Leinster, 23¼ per cent. in Munster, 16 per cent. in Ulster, & no less than 28¼ per cent. in Connaught. There were 1,472,787 families in Ireland in 1841, & 1,207,002 in 1851. There were 1,328,839 inhabited houses in 1841, and 1,061,405 in 1851. In the year 1851 there were several small towns in which there were more persons in the workhouse than out of it; such was the case in Ballinrobe, Dingle, Gort, Granard, Kanturk, Kilrush, Listowel, Millstreet, & Newcastle (Co. Limerick); at Listowel there were nearly twice as many persons within as without the workhouse. Many of the principal towns showed a fair increase in 1851, on the numbers presented in 1841; but the only really large increase was in Belfast, where the population increased in those ten years from 75,308 to 102,103. The great falling-off was in the miserable country villages & small towns.

Three years of deficient potato crop (1845-6-7), and many years of active emigration, brought about this decrease of population. When 2,000,000 tons of the staple food of a people are lost in one year, it needs not much argument to show that famine, disease, & death must ensue.

Of the encumbered estates in Ireland, in 1853, the produce of sales amounted to 8,790,918*l.* Purchases of 2,000*l.* & under, 2,225; of 2,000*l.* to 5,000*l.*, 709; of 5,000*l.* to 20,000*l.*, 468; & above 20,000*l.*, 26.

In respect to emigration, it is estimated that about 1,800,000 emigrants left Ireland in the ten years from the middle of 1841 to the middle of 1851, or 180,000 average annually. It is believed that in 1851 the numbers were not less than 250,000. As the strong & healthy are more likely to emigrate than the very young, the old, or the sickly, the natural increase of population is not likely to go on at its usual rate; and there is an opinion that the total population of Ireland has been further diminished in 1851, '52, & '53, the births & immigrations not being equal to the deaths & emigrations.

From the last Report of the Land & Emigration Commissioners (April 1853), it appears that the emigration from 15 Irish ports, in 1852, amounted to 41,441; the largest numbers being from Cork & Limerick. But the numbers of Irish who emigrate direct from Ireland are small compared to those who previously come to Liverpool or some other British port, & thence emigrate. The emigration from Liverpool during the year amounted to the extraordinary number of 229,099, nearly twice as much as all the other British & Irish ports combined. Of a grand total of 368,764 emigrants, 348,403 were steerage passengers, their poverty being chiefly represented by that of the Irish emigrants. The Commissioners have no means of determining exactly how many Irish emigrants are included in the total number; but they think it safe to assume that nine-tenths of all who sail from Liverpool, & one-third of those who sail from the Clyde (to North America) are from Ireland; these, together with the emigrants from Irish ports, would give about the following numbers during the last six years:—1847, 220,000; 1848, 181,000; 1849, 219,000; 1850, 214,000; 1851, 254,000; 1852, 225,000; or 1,313,000 in six years; or 219,000 annual average. In so far as the number for 1852 was about 30,000 less than for 1851, we may perhaps infer that the Irish peasantry had to that extent began to experience the improving state of things in their unfortunate country. One of the most striking commercial phenomena presented by Ireland at the present moment is the amount of money sent back by emigrants, to assist those who are left behind. The amount in five years as ascertained through the medium of Anglo-American banking-houses, were as follows:—1848, 460,000*l.*; 1849, 540,000*l.*; 1850, 957,000*l.*; 1851, 990,000*l.*; 1852, 1,404,000*l.* If we suppose these sums to have been sent over by the emigrants of 6 months' or 12 months' previous date, it amounts to about 4*l.* transmitted by each emigrant—sufficient, with that which is transmitted through private hands, to defray the whole cost of emigration. America, therefore, & not Ireland, practically pays the expenses of Irish emigration to the United States; for, it may here be remarked, nearly all the emigrants from Ireland proceed to that region.

If we mention the subject of pauperism in connection with any improvements in the social condition of Ireland, it is chiefly with the view of estimating at its due value any diminution in the demands on the fund appropriated for the use of the poor. What would have been the state of the wretched poor of Ireland during the famine years, had not a poor law been in existence, it is fearful to contemplate. The system commenced no farther back than 1839, the first Union workhouse being opened in 1840. Although 1847 was the great year of scarcity in the potato-crop, it was not till 1849 that the poor-law felt the full burden of the pressure. In that year it was tremendous. There were in some of the towns more persons in the workhouses than out of them. No fewer than 923,234 persons received in-door relief, & 1,210,482 received out-door relief in 1849. In respect both to in-door and out-door relief, there has been a steady decrease in 1850, '51, '52, & '53; especially out-door, which has, in fact, almost ceased. In January, 1851, there were 86,303 able-bodied paupers in the Irish union workhouses; in Jan., 1853, there were 50,938, with every prospect of a gradual decrease in their number. The causes of decrease are two: some of the paupers decide on emigrating, while there is an increased field-labor demand for others."

ISPAHAN, or ISFAHAN, Aspadana, a famous city, & formerly the cap. of Persia, now cap. the prov. Irak-Ajemi, & of a beglerbeylik, about 215 m. S. Teheran. Lat. 32° 45′ N., lon. 51° 50′ E. Pop. has been variously estimated from 60,000 to 250,000; it probably exceeds 100,000. It stands enclosed by orchards & plantations, in a fine plain on the Zendarood, here crossed by several noble bridges. It was one of the richest & most populous cities of Asia under Shah Abbas the Great, in the 17th century; but in the 18th, during the Afghan invasion of Persia, its walls were destroyed, & it was reduced to a state of decay, in which much of its site remains. Principal remaining edifices are the great bazaar of Shah Abbas, numerous magnificent buildings around an open space termed the Maidan, upwards of 100 mosques, & various palaces & fine gardens scattered throughout the city, the most remarkable being the palace of the forty pillars, the favorite residence of the later sovereigns. Of late a new palace has been built, & endeavors have been made to improve Ispahan, & revive cultivation in its vicinity. Its artisans are esteemed the best in Persia; & it has manufs. of all kinds of woven fabrics, gold & silver wares, paper articles, fire arms, sword blades, glass, earthenwares, articles of luxury, which are sent by caravans to Bagdad, Herat, India, & most parts of W. ITALY (anc Italia, German Italien), a country of S. Europe formed of a continental portion, a peninsula, & numerous islands. Considered geographically, it extends from the extremity of Sicily to the Rhætian Alps, between lat. 36° 35′ & 47° N. & from the W. point of the Cottian Alps to the E. extremity of Terra d'Otranto, between lon. 6° 35′ & 18° 35′ E. Politically it extends 1° farther W., to include the prov. of Savoy in the Sardinian States. It is bounded E. by the Adriatic & the Ionian Sea, S. by the Mediterranean, W. by France & the Mediterranean, & N. by Switzerland & Austria. Its natural confines are the Alps & the sea, the W. boundary being determined by the river Varo, & the E. by a pass in the Alps, near Buccari, in the Gulf of Quarnero. Within these limits, Italy comprises 13 separate divisions, including Italian Switzerland:—the canton Tessin (Ticino), & part of the Grisons (Grigione), & Valais; Austrian Italy; the Italian Tyrol, the kingdom of Lombardy & Venice, Istria, Trieste, &c.; French Italy, Island of Corsica:—& English Italy, the Maltese islands; the entire area of which is estimated at 100,000 Italian sq. m., & the pop. at upwards of 22 millions. The continental portion of the country is separated from the rest of Europe by the chain of the Alps, and its waters belong entirely to the basin of the Mediterranean Sea. The coast has a development of about 2,174 m. The shores of the Adriatic are little indented, & on the N. are shallow & bordered by marshes; those of the Ionian Sea are flat only at the foot of the Gulf of Tarentum; the W. shores of Italy are generally more elevated than the eastern, except in the Maremma at the mouths of the Arno, & in the Pontine marshes. The chief islands are Sicily, Sardinia, Corsica, Elba, Malta, & the Lipari islands. The principal gulfs and bays are, in the Adriatic, those of Venice and Manfredonia, in the Ionian Sea, Tarentum, & Squillace; the Gulf of Genoa & the bays of St. Eufemia, Policastro, Salerno, Naples, & Gaeta; & the chief straits those of Messina and Bonifacio. The most prominent capes are Piombino, Argentaro, Circello, Campanella, Spartivento, and Leuca, on the 2 S. points.

The country is generally well watered, but, except the Po, the rivers are small, & generally mere torrents; the chief of these are, in the basin of the Adriatic, the Tagliamento, Piave, Brenta, Po, Aterno, Sangro, and Ofanto; in the basin of the Ionian Sea, the Bradano; & in that of the Mediterranean, the Arno, Ombrone, Tiber, Garigliano, & Volturno; the Rhone forms part of the frontier of Savoy. Italy has some of the largest mountain lakes in Europe, which are celebrated for their picturesque beauty; the chief are Geneva, Maggiore, Garda, & Lugano, portions of which only belong to the territory—Como & Iseo, which are entirely Italian. On the S. slope of the Apennines are the small lakes of Trasimene, Bolsena, Bracciano, Fucino, & Celano, mostly of classic interest. Italy is divided naturally into a N. portion beyond the peninsula, including the vast basin of the Po—a prolongation of the basin of the Adriatic—the surface of which rises gradually to Piedmont, in the N.; & the central & S. portion, or the true peninsula, which in general is mountainous, or hilly, traversed throughout its length by the chain of the Apennines, from which considerable plains, nearly level, extend along its shores. From its position, form, & configuration, Italy enjoys a varied & excellent climate, which permits the productions of the temp. & some of those of the torrid zone to mingle on its almost uniformly fertile surface. The exceptions to this are the pestilential marshes, especially the Maremma in Tuscany, the theatre of a prolonged struggle between human industry & the malignity of the climate, & now nearly deserted. Snow lies during the year only in the Alps, at an elevation of 9,500 feet; the valley of the Po has a temperate climate, resembling that of the centre of France; its lakes & portions of the lagoons of Venice are frozen in winter; & the orange & lemon do not ripen in the open air. In the region between lat. 38° 30′ & 40° 30′ N., snow falls only on the slopes of the mountains, & the olive, orange, & citron, ripen in the open air; between lat. 39° & 41° 30′, snow is very rare, & in the S. of Calabria, Sicily, & the neighboring islands, the climate permits of the cultivation of tropical plants. Mean annual temp.—Milan, lat. 55° 28′—55° .2; Venice, lat. 45° 25′—55° .4; Florence, lat. 43° 46′—59° .2; Rome, lat. 41° 54′—60° .5; Naples, lat. 40° 50′—59° .6; Palermo, lat. 38° 6′—63° .1 Fahr. The prevailing winds of Italy are W. & S.W., during which the air is pure and healthy, but the S. portion of the country is frequently visited by the pestilential winds of Africa, the Sirocco, & Libeccio, during which vegetation is arrested, and the human frame becomes languid & feeble; fever is prevalent in the marshy districts. Italy is rich in mineral products, but has few metals, except iron & lead. The Apennines supply the beautiful marble of Carrara. Sulphur, borax, salt, nitre, alum, alabaster, lava, and other volcanic productions, are abundant. There is one active volcano (Vesuvius) in the peninsula, and 4 in the islands (Etna, Stromboli, Vulcano, & Vulcanello); there are many mineral & gaseous springs. The vegetable productions of Italy are extremely varied; the Alps afford excellent pasture, & forests with a great variety of timber. The fauna resembles that of the rest of Europe in similar latitudes, except that it embraces the buffalo, & among vipers the asp, scorpion, & tarantula. Fish are abundant in the rivers. The horses of Piedmont are esteemed, & in the S. their place is supplied by excellent mules. The coasts of Sicily furnish sponges & corals; the chief products of the soil are corn in Sicily and in the plain of the Po, which last also possess the only extensive rice fields in Europe. The chesnut forms an important article of food in the Apennines. The vine, olive, & other fruit trees yield abundant crops; & in the S. the sugar-cane, orange, & fig are cultivated; the culture of the mulberry, & the rearing of the silk worm, forms an important branch of industry, & cotton is cultivated with success. Cattle are reared to a considerable extent in the N., & goats & swine in the S. The manufs., except in the N., unimportant, comprise silk, chiefly in Lombardy & Piedmont, the other manufs. are woollens, silk, gauze, porcelain, artificial flowers, hats, paper, parchment, & musical instruments. The principal imports are colonial goods, linen, woollen & cotton fabrics, jewellery, & dried fish. Chief exports, silk, wool, oil, honey, straw hats, & Parmesan cheese; but commerce has greatly declined. The arts & sciences are still cultivated with considerable success. Throughout the whole of Italy, except Savoy & Corsica, Italian, in very different dialects, is the language of the country, but it is spoken in its purity only in Tuscany. The established religion is Roman Catholic, but all sects are now tolerated. Notwithstanding the immense natural advantages of the country, the general population of Italy is in a state of the most abject poverty, & the value of human life is nearly the lowest in the scale of European nations, the proportion of deaths to the inhabitants being, in Italy generally, 1 in 30, in Naples 1 in 29, while in England the proportion is 1 in 45, & in Norway 1 in 50. Under the Romans, Italy was divided into the provs. of Cisalpine-Gaul, & Venetia in the N.; Italy-proper in the centre; & Magna-Græcia in the S. The political arrangements of Modern Italy were changed for a time by the conquests of Napoleon. In 1801, Savoy & Piedmont were united to France, the duchy of Milan formed the Cisalpine republic, to which, in 1805, the duchy of Venice & its continental possessions were added, forming together the kingdom of Italy; & Genoa was incorporated with France; Naples was seized, the pope & the other sovereigns were deposed, & thus all Italy, except Sicily & Sardinia, was subjected to the Emperor of France. After the dismemberment of the French Empire in 1814, the states were restored to their former rulers, except the duchies of Milan & Venice, which were given to Austria, and formed the Lombardo-Venetian kingdom. JAPAN, an empire of E. Asia, comprising the isls. Niphon, Kiusiu, & Sikokf, with the dependencies Yesso, the S. part of Tarakai or Saghalien, and many smaller islands, situated between lat. 26° 35′ & 49° N., & lon. 129° & 150° E., having W. the Strait of Corea, & Sea of Japan, & on other sides the Pacific Ocean. Area has been set down at 266,500 sq. m., and pop. very uncertainly estimated at from 25 millions to 50 millions. These islands, especially Niphon & Kiusiu, are extremely irregular in shape, their coasts greatly indented, & surface very uneven. The mountains Fusi & Siro-Jama in Niphon are active volcanoes, and estimated to rise respectively to 12,000 & 8,000 ft. above the sea, & snow clad. Rivers numerous, & generally wide at their mouths, but their courses are short & not navigable for many miles inland. Of the lakes, the principal appears to be Fakoni, regarded by the Japanese with superstitious reverence. The interior of Japan, however, remains quite unexplored by foreigners. In a country extending over 15° of lat., the climate is so varied that almost every prov. has different products; it is in general mild and healthy, but hurricanes & earthquakes are of frequent occurrence. The soil is said to be in many parts sterile, but it is very carefully cultivated; agriculture being compulsory by sumptuary laws.

Foremost among the resources of Japan are its fisheries. The sea & its productions, we believe, contribute fully as much to the sustenance of the natives as do the fruits of the earth—rice, perhaps, excepted. One of their productions has a value which is not confined to the spot, but extends to us—to our enterprise, and our trade—we mean the whale, or, as they call it, kudsuri. There is nothing of which such extensive use is made by the Japanese, both for rich & poor. It is found all around Japan, but particularly in the sea Keumano, the most important territory of the Empire; & it also prevails in the islands of Tsussima & Goto, & upon the coasts of Omura & Nomo. These whales not only afford oil in great abundance, but their flesh, which is considered very wholesome & nutritious, is largely consumed. No part of them, indeed, is thrown away—all is made available to some useful purpose or another, excepting only the large shoulder bone. The skin, which is generally black, the flesh, which is red & looks like beef, the intestines, & all the inward parts besides the fat or blubber, which is boiled into oil, and the bone which is converted to innumerable uses—all is made available to purposes of profit. We have gone into these few particulars respecting the whale because it is that which has brought our countrymen into contact with Japan. Many of our ships have for some considerable time past frequented those seas for capturing the whale, an occupation which, it is found, might be pursued with great advantage under a commercial treaty with the Government of Japan, whose inhuman laws at present not only prevent any assistance being rendered to shipwrecked mariners, but expose them to positive maltreatment, & even to violent death. To obtain redress in this respect was the primary object of Commodore Perry's expedition.

Japan abounds in natural & artificial productions of great value. Its mineral riches are enormous, and include metals of various kinds, especially gold, silver, & copper. Sulphur & nitre are also found in large quantities,—there is no want of coal, & there are precious stones of almost every variety; agates, saphires, jaspers, cornelians, & even diamonds; while pearls are found in great plenty among the shells upon the coast. Then the fertility of the soil is very great. The mulberry tree grows extensively & affords food for countless myriads of silk worms. The Kadsi, or paper-tree, serves innumerable useful purposes, including the manufacture of cloth, stuffs, & cordage. The cerusi, or varnish-tree, is another valuable production of the country, yielding large quantities of a milky juice which the natives employ to varnish, or japan, as we call it, various articles. Then there are the bay-tree, the camphor-tree, the fig-tree, the cypress-tree, with very many more, all more or less valuable, & from which a great variety of useful things are made; and last, though not least, there is the tea-shrub, from the leaves of which the common drink of the people is brewed, & which is capable of yielding a valuable article of commerce. Trees growing nuts of various kinds are abundant; the maple is extensive & excellent; bamboos are very plentiful, & of great use, as they are everywhere in the Indies; they cultivate as much hemp & cotton as they can find room for in their fields; & as to rice, which is the main food of the natives, that grown in Japan, is considered the best in all Asia, & it can be produced in almost any quantity. Their corns are of several sorts; besides the komi, or rice, there are the comuggi, a kind of barley; the koomuggi, their native wheat; and the daidson, a species of bean,—all of which abound with superior farina.

Cattle rearing is unimportant; buffaloes & oxen are used only for draught, & sheep are scarce. Fish and coral abound on the coasts; pearls & ambergris are obtained. In some rural arts the Japanese are unequalled; such as the dwarfing of forest trees, & raising radishes & other bulbous roots of an enormous size. The manufactures of Japan have hitherto been confined almost exclusively to their own domestic wants; but many of them are nevertheless valuable as articles of export. Our adoption here and throughout Europe of the term japan, as applied to certain kinds of varnished ware, indicates how well known has been their peculiar excellence in, if not their invention of, the useful art. They make various articles from the paper tree resembling papier maché, which they paint & varnish very highly—and these might form objects of considerable trade. Their silks, muslins, and cotton goods are most of them very superior, & some of them are calculated to become highly recherché; and their carvings in wood, ivory, pearl & fish-bone, are most ingenious & elegant. These are but a few of the products of their handicraft; but they are sufficient to show, taken in connection with their natural productions, how varied & how valuable are the resources of the Japanese.

Some trade is suffered with Chinese merchants, who bring broad-cloths and other woollen stuffs to Nangasaki, in return for sea-slug, copper and lacquered wares; & the Dutch are permitted to send annually 2 ships to the same port with wax, camphor, spices, ivory, lead, iron bars, quicksilver, glass wares, musk, sapan wood, sugar, piece goods, & woollens, for which they take back copper, camphor, silk, lacquered goods, wax, pitch, wheat, & Japanese manufs. No commerce is allowed with other foreign nations. An expedition sailed from the United States of America, in 1853, to Japan for the purpose of opening the ports of this country to the maritime nations of the world. Commodore Perry, commander of the expedition, had an interview with the officials of that empire, on the 8th March, 1854. That the preliminaries of a treaty would be settled during the visit, is more than probable. Its leading provisions, will be the opening of three or more of the ports of Japan to the commerce of the United States, & securing supplies of coals for steamers. In other respects the treaty concluded or proposed, is understood to be nearly a counterpart of that with China, except, it is said, that the Japanese objected to a clause admitting all other countries to the same privileges as America; not like the Chinese, from whom, & not from Sir Henry Pottinger, as is generally supposed, the privileges of the English treaty were extended to all foreign countries. The Japanese would manifest more sagacity, and save themselves from incalculable vexation, were they to allow other nations to enjoy the same immunities—modelling all future treaties on precisely the same terms. The law, which separates the Japanese from intercourse with other countries, has forced them to draw on their own resources, hence the empire is nearly independent of external aid.—It is a world in itself. The government is despotic, and like some others in Asia, is shared by ecclesiastical & military sovereigns. The mikado, or lord of the dairi, or court of miako, is the nominal head of the empire, has almost divine honors & exerts religious rule, & was anciently invested with all the authority; but in the 12th century, a siogun, or high military officer, was appointed, one of whose successors, in 1583, assumed the rank of a second emperor: since which period the siogun has maintained the actual sway, the dairi sovereign being consulted by him only regarding relations with foreign powers. The siogun, who resides at Yeddo, is assisted by a council of five hereditary princes, & by a senate which forms the legislative body, & decides in all civil & criminal cases. A kind of feudal system prevails; the princes, of whom there are about 200, governing different districts, are obliged to maintain troops in readiness to move at the order of the siogun. The executive duties are performed by 7 boards,—those of taxation, commerce, public works, police, criminal justice, military affairs, & religion. Japan is divided into 8 provs., 68 deps., & 622 lists., the governors of which are termed daimios, "high named," & hold their offices direct from the dairi sovereign; or sai-mio, "well named," who are appointed by the siogun. The laws are very rigorous; many popular rights & customs, however, appear to exist, & the Japanese are certainly less corruptly governed, & less shackled by ancient usages than the Chinese. The ancient religion is the sin-siu, whose priests were said to be descended of the sun, but the majority of the pop. are adherents of Buddhism, introduced into Japan about the 6th century of our era, though some profess the doctrines of Confucius. The Japanese are of the Mongolian race, & are stout & well made. They have a written literature, some science, & a taste for music. Their language is different from that of the Chinese.

JAVA, p. o., Lucas co., O.

JAVA, the principal of the Dutch E. India isls., between lat. 5° 52′ & 8° 50′ S., & lon. 105° 15′ E., separated E. from Bali by the strait of Bali, & W. from Sumatra by the strait of Sunda, & having N. the sea of Java, & S. the Indian Ocean. Length E. to W., 570 m., breadth varies from 48 to 115 m. Estimated area, including the contiguous island Madura, 50,000 sq. m.; & pop. 1849, 9,560,380; comprising Europeans & their descendants 16,308; natives 9,401,712; Chinese 106,033; Arabs, Bughis, &c., 31,216; slaves 5,111. The S. coast is high and steep, with few indentations. A mntn. chain extends through the centre from W. to E., with a mean elevation of 1,000 feet, having numerous volcanic peaks, some of which rise to 1,000 feet. Its N. coast is low & marshy, & lined with numerous small islands. Principal river, the Solo, besides which many are navigable for several miles from the sea, or used for floating down timber & other raw produce from the interior. The rocks are chiefly basaltic and volcanic, & the soil is extremely fertile. Java is supposed to be capable of supporting many times its present amount of pop. At present only about 1-3d part of the surface is under culture; but the island is the granary of the Asiatic Archipelago. Temp. hot in the plains, but cooler in the elevated parts. Earthquakes & thunderstorms are common, hurricanes rare. Rice is the principal grain, & is cultivated all along the coast, as also in all the low grounds wherever irrigation can be effected. Coffee is the great staple of export; it is raised in most of the uplands, especially in the Preanger or Prianga, regencies on the W. part of the island, & with sugar, its culture has greatly increased within the last few years. Indigo, tobacco, cotton, cinnamon, maize, & other dry grains, pulses, & vegetable oils, cocoa, & sago, are other principal products.

Java is the only island of the E. Archipelago of which the teak tree is a native. This tree grows in dense forests on the hills, & is superior to that of Pegu, though not equal to that of Malabar. Tigers, tiger cats, & leopards, and the jackall, abound. The rhinoceros is also a native, but no elephants, camels, or asses. Buffaloes are numerous, and a small breed of horses. Black cattle and goats are common; sheep & hogs are scarce. Domestic poultry are plentiful. Crocodiles & serpents abound, & fish are numerous in the adjacent seas. Few minerals are known to exist, but iron, salt, sulphur, & nitre, are obtained. Manufs. of cotton fabrics, & other household necessaries are general, & the Javanese excel the nations of the neighboring isls. in the production of most manufactured goods; but the colony is essentially agricultural, & nearly all its exports consist of vegetable produce. Total value of the merchandise exported from Java & Madura in 1849, 60,306,313 florins, consisting of coffee, sugar, indigo, rice, arrack, provisions, hides, cinnamon, rattans, spices, Banca tin, tobacco, edible birds' nests, & salt. Imports comprising cottons, woollens, & other manufactured goods, wines, spirits, iron, hardwares, machinery, opium, and articles of luxury, amounted in the same year to 24,636,241 fl., of which the value of 394,041 fl. were sent to the United States. Trade with Holland absorbs 3-4ths of the whole, & is chiefly carried on by the Dutch E. I. Company. Batavia, the cap., is the centre of at least half of the general trade. Gov. administered by a gov.-general, with authority over all the Dutch E. I. colonies, & assisted by a secretary-general, & a council of 4 members, of Dutch descent. Java is divided into 22 residencies, in each of which are an European governor, & secretary, and various sub-residents. The provs. are subdivided into arronds. & communes, in each of which is a justice of the peace. Three superior tribunals & courts-martial are seated at Batavia, Samarang, & Surabaya, the whole subordinate to a supreme court at Batavia. Perfect religious toleration exists, & Europeans are not prevented from going to Java (as formerly to British India), though the permission of the governor-general is necessary to their settling there. Public improvements have lately been much extended. A good road traverses the island in its entire length; many forts have been constructed in the interior; & commercial stations planted in the S. part of the island; regular steam communication is kept up with Singapore. Several native states exist in the interior, under Dutch protection, the principal caps. of which are Surakarta & Yugyacarta. Java remained under Hindoo sovereignties until 1478, when it was conquered by the Arabs, and its possession has since been chiefly Mohammedan. It contains the ruins of several considerable cities & temples, the principal being Mojopahit & Boro-Budor, & various large structures of substantial architecture are scattered over its surface. The Javanese are of the Malay family, are short, thick-set, & robust. It is presumed that Hindoos, at an early period, settled in the island, as Hindoo monuments of antiquity are found. The religion is Mohammedan, mixed with Buddhism. 3 dialects of the Malay language are used; & they have an ancient sacred language, containing a number of Sanscrit words. They have a national literature, & translations from the Arabic & Sanscrit. The Javanese are superior in civilization to other natives of the Indian Archipelago. The Portuguese formed a settlement on it in 1511, & the Dutch in 1575. The British held the isl. from 1811 to 1816.

JAVA (SEA OF), is that part of the Pacific Ocean between lat. 3° & 7° S., & lon. 106° & 116° E., having E. the strait of Macassar & sea of Flores, S. Java and Bali, N. Borneo, & W. Sumatra. It communicates S.ward with the Indian Ocean by the straits of Sunda, Bali, & Lombok, & N.W.ward with the China Sea, by the Carimata passage & strait of Gaspar, E. and W. Billiton.

JERSEY, Cæsarea, the largest and most S.E. of the islands belonging to Great Britain, in S. of the English Channel, 13 m. W. the coast of France (Cotentin), and 35 m. S. Portland-isle. Lat. of St. Helier's, 49° 11′ 3″ N., lon. 2° 7′ W. Length, E. to W., 12 m.; average breadth 5 miles. Area, 39,000 ac. Inhabited houses, 7,913. Pop. 1851, 57,020. Coasts rocky and abrupt; the only considerable inlet is St. Aubin's Bay, on the E. side, skirted by a sandy shore. Surface undulating; the hill ranges consisting of granite and schist, run mostly N. to S., enclosing several fertile valleys. Climate very mild. Mean annual temp. 51°.9, mean summer 62°.2, mean winter 42°.6. Property greatly subdivided, & little corn is raised, the chief produce being apples; the whole island appears very like a continuous orchard, dotted with picturesque villages. About 2,000 hhds. of cider are exported. Cows of a small & good breed are numerous, & butter is exported to England. Sheep are few, and most part of the mutton consumed is imported from France. Off the S.E. coast are extensive oyster beds, resorted to by a large fishing fleet belonging to the island. Manufs. are wholly insignificant, except those of hosiery and shoes. The trade is active & increasing, owing to the absence of import duties, & the privilege that the Channel Islands possess of exporting their own produce to England, subject only to the same duties imposed on the produce of Great Britain. Exports to England are chiefly cattle, potatoes, spirits, oysters, & granite, in return for cotton & woollen fabrics, hardwares and cutlery, glass, soap, earthenwares, about 20,000 tons of coal annually, & general merchandise. Imports from France are wine, brandy, skins, fruit, & poultry; from Spain and Portugal, brandy & wines; from N. Europe, timber, tallow, hemp, linens, & corn, in return chiefly for colonial produce from the W. Indies & Brazil, with which countries Jersey has an active and direct commerce. Steamers communicate frequently with Southampton, Weymouth, St. Malo, & Granville; & Jersey is the residence of numerous English families of limited income. It has its own legislature, the "states" or insular parliament consisting of 36 members, chosen by the inhabitants, their acts being confirmed or annulled, in special cases, by the Viscount, or English governor. From the decisions of its royal court, appeal lies only to the sovereign in council. The military governor has under him usually about 300 regular troops, besides which Jersey has a militia of 2,500 men, with an artillery battalion. The island is divided into 12 parishes in the diocese of Winchester. Its native inhabitants speak a French patois, and preserve many Norman feudal customs, the Channel Isls. having formed a part of the Norman dom., & remained attached to England since the Conquest. Principal towns, St. Helier, the cap., & St. Aubin.

JERSEY CITY, N. J., 88 m. N.E. Trenton, 224 W. Situated on the rt. b. of Hudson r., opposite to New York, with which it is connected by a ferry, on which numerous commodious steamboats are constantly plying. Incorporated as a city in 1820. In 1850, the township of Van Vorst was included in the city limits under a new charter, & four wards established. It is governed by a mayor & alderman. The ground, on which the city is built, projects into Hudson r., having bays W. & S. of it. It is handsomely laid out, with broad streets crossing each other at right angles. It contains 10 churches,—2 Episcopal, 3 Dutch Reformed, 3 Methodist, 1 Roman Catholic, & 1 Baptist,—a lyceum with a handsome brick edifice, 3 female academies, & a high school for boys, 3 public schools, 2 insurance companies, 2 banks, an extensive pottery, a flint glass-works employing 200 hands, 4 lumber yards with a capital of $150,000, 1 locomotive fac., 1 cement works, 4 printing offices, 2 daily & 1 tri-weekly newspaper, & about 100 stores. Pop. in 1850, 11,578; 1853, 18,456. The Cunard R. M. Steamship Co. have their wharf and storehouses here, & the following railroads centre at a handsome depôt here; viz., the N. J. railroad, Paterson, New York & Erie, & the Morris & Essex, connecting at Newark. The Morris canal, 101 m. long, connecting the Delaware & Hudson rivers, terminates here. The city is lighted with gas, & works are in preparation for supplying it with water to be brought in pipes from Passaic r.

JERUSALEM (Hebrew Kagushah, Arabic El Kuds or Khoddes, "the holy," ancient Hierosolyma, & Ælia Colonia) a famous city of Palestine, interesting as the seat of the most important events described in Holy Writ, is now comprised in the Turkish pash. Damascus, & near the centre of the mountain region, between the Mediterranean & the Dead Sea, 33 m. S.E. its port, Jaffa, & 2,660 feet above the sea. Lat. 31° 46′ 43″ N., & lon. 35° 13′ E. Mean annual temp. 62°.6; summer 73°.8; winter 49°.6. Stationary pop. variously estim. from 10,000 to 20,000, but about Easter the number is annually augmented by a great crowd of Christian, Mohammedan, & Jewish pilgrims. The modern city, on a tongue of land, betw. the valley of the Kedron (valley of Jehosaphat), on the N. and E., and that of Gihon (valley of Hinnom), which joins the former immediately on the S.E., occupies the four hills of Zion & Acra on the W., & Moriah & Bezetha on the E.; these hills being separated by a deep longitudinal valley, extending from N. to S., & the two former again by a transverse valley, the ancient Tyropœon. The hills are of limestone, & the surrounding country is not very fertile. The city is about 2¼ m. in circ., surrounded by stately walls of hewn stone, built in the 16th century, & probably enclosing the same area that Jerusalem has had since the days of Hadrian; but the city, previously to its destruction by Titus, is conjectured to have been nearly twice as extensive, & a part even of Mount Zion, the site of the citadel of David, is not comprised within the modern walls. Jerusalem is at present entered by four gates facing toward the cardinal points. The public ways are narrow, ill paved and dull; but the houses are in general better built, & the streets cleaner than those of Alexandria, Smyrna, or even Constantinople. The dwellings are of hewn stone, often large, & furnished with small domes, which are apparently peculiar to the towns of Judea. All the edifices possessing any interest are of a religious character. On Mount Moriah is an oblong area, 510 yards in length, N. to S., by a breadth varying from 318 to 350 yards, & which anciently formed the site of the famous temple, & probably, also, of the fortress of Antonia. This area is still enclosed by walls, which on the E. side form a part of the outer wall of the city, & both there, & at the S.W. corner, are portions composed of stones of vast size, considered to have formed parts of the identical walls raised by Solomon or his successors. Dr. Robinson confidently supposes that he discovered the traces of an ancient bridge connecting the temple with Mount Zion, across the valley of the Tyropœon, & mentioned by Josephus in his account of the capture of the city by Titus. The tower of Hippicus, on the W. side of the city (mentioned by ancient authorities as the starting point of the three lines of walls, which at different periods enclosed it), is still to be identified, as are the pools of Hezekiah, Gihon, and Siloam, the vaults & cisterns of the temple, & some of the ancient gates now walled up; but few other sites of antiquity are now traceable, & the localities pointed out by the monks as those of the actual Via Dolorosa of the Holy Sepulchre, &c., have, at best, but an apocryphal claim to their titles. Among the most conspicuous modern buildings, are the mosque of Omar (Kubbet-es Sukkra, "dome of the rock"), an elegant octagonal edifice erected between A. D. 686 and 693, in the centre of the temple area; the mosque of El Aksa, at the S.W. extremity of the same area; the gorgeous church of the Holy Sepulchre, a Byzantine edifice, erected by Helena, the mother of Constantine the Great, over the reputed site of the sepulchre on Mount Acra: the Greek, Coptic, and Latin convents, & the ruined palace of the Hospitallers, on the same mount; the Armenian & Syrian convents, & the church of St. James on Mount Zion; the church of St. Anna, & the reputed birth-place of the Virgin on Mount Bezetha; & the modern citadel close to the Jaffa gate. Between Mounts Moriah & Bezetha is a deep reservoir, which the monks have named Bethesda; Robinson, however, conjectures that the true Pool of Bethesda was what is now called the fountain of the Virgin, in the valley of Jehosaphat, without the walls, & which communicates with the Pool of Siloam by an artificial subterraneous conduit beneath Mount Ophel. Outside of the walls are also the (so-called) House of Caiaphas, now an Armenian convent, the Moslem tomb & mosque of David, the Armenian, Greek, & Latin cemeteries all on Mount Zion; the pools of Gihon, and the remains of an anc. aqueduct; on the N., the Mohammedan cemeteries; the edifices designated the tombs "of the kings and of the judges." On the E., in the valley of Jehosaphat, are numerous other tombs, & the garden of Gethsemane, beyond which rises the Mount of Olives, having on its S. & S.W. the Mount of Offence & vill. of Siloam. On the S. the valley of Hinnom (Gihon), is bounded by the Hill of Evil Counsel. Jerusalem has some manufs. of soap, but its principal trade is in rosaries, & similar products made in the city; in the middle ages vast quantities of earth were removed from holy localities within the walls, & shipped to form the famous campo santo at Pisa. The city was originally taken from the Jebusites by the Hebrews under Joshua about B. C. 1400; was taken & destroyed by Nebuchadnezzar, B. C. 598; rebuilt by command of Cyrus, B. C. 586; again taken by Ptolemy Soter, B. C. 324, & subjugated to Egypt; afterwards held by the Maccabees; taken by Pompey, B. C. 63; & held as a Roman city under Herod, who rebuilt the temple, until its almost total destruction by the troops of Titus, A. D. 70. At this period, in the words of Pliny, it was the most famous city, not only of Palestine, but of the whole east. In A. D. 135, the Jews were finally dispersed, & the city was again rebuilt by Adrian. It was captured by the Persians in 614, by the Saracens under Omar in 637, in 1099 by the crusaders under Godfrey of Bouillon, & held by the Christians for 88 years, when it was again captured by the forces of Saladin in 1187; & it has remained under Turkish government ever since, except for a short interval during 1832, when it was taken by the Egyptians under Ibrahim Pasha. It has since become the see of a Protestant bishop, appointed alternately by the governments of Great Britain & Prussia. The pop., consists of Mohammedans, Jews, and Christians.

KAFFRARIA, CAFFRARIA, or KAFIRLAND, an extensive region of S.E. Africa, represented in old maps as extending N. to Abyssinia, but now understood to comprise the space between lat. 32° & 34° S., & lon. 27° 20′ & 29° 30′ E., bounded E. & S. by the Indian Ocean, S.W. & W. by the Keiskama (which separates it from the dist. Victoria), the Chumie, and the Kliss Plaat rivers, & N. indefinitely, by a chain of mountains in a direction from E. to W. The S.E. portion of the country (called by the natives Amakosa, & inhabited by the Kosas, or Kaffirs proper) is watered by numerous streams, the chief of which are the Great Kei, Somerset, Buffalo, & Keiskama, all of which rise in the mountainous country of the interior, & flow S. E. to the Indian Ocean. Beyond these mountains, on the N., is the country of the Amatemba Kaffirs, or Tambookies, the rivers of which are chiefly affluents of the Great Kei. The mountains are composed of trap rocks. Valuable minerals are rare. Soil in many places fertile. The climate differs widely from that of the Cape Colony. Here winter is the dry season. From May to August it seldom rains. In summer the rainy season sets in with terrific thunder storms. In spring the temp. of the plains seldom exceed 50° Fahr.; in summer it is between 70° & 90°, & before storms it frequently rises to upwards of 100° Fahr. The Caffres are described as hospitable, intelligent, acute, & brave, but dishonest & superstitious. They practise the rite of circumcision. They are generally believed to be of the negro race, & are of a dark brown color. The men are tall & active, & more handsome than the women. They have no written characters; but their language is sonorous, resembling Italian. They are simple in their habits, & live on the produce of the chase, & the milk supplied by their numerous herds. Their chief vegetable products are maize, millet, & water melons. They are passionately fond of tobacco. The Caffres are divided into hordes, and governed by hereditary chiefs, who exercise absolute rule. They have made many incursions into the Cape Colony, & from 1835 to 1846, frequent skirmishes occurred between them & the colonists, which led to the extension of the colony from the Keiskama to the Great Kei river, a district now called British Kaffraria. It is divided into the counties of Northumberland, York, Sussex, Middlesex, Cambridge, Lincoln, & Bedford. Cap. King-William town, on the Buffalo, co. Middlesex. The principal forts are Wellington & Cox.

Federal representative pop. 898,012.

Surface, soil, &c.—A tract from five to twenty miles wide along the Ohio river, through the whole length of the state, is hilly & broken, but has a fertile soil. The margin of the Ohio for about a mile in width, consists of bottom lands, which are overflowed when the river is high. Between this tract of hilly country the more mountainous eastern counties & Green river is a fertile tract, frequently denominated the garden of the state. It is about 150 miles long, & from 50 to 100 wide. The soil is excellent, the surface gently undulating, & the forest-growth black walnut, black cherry, buckeye, paw-paw, sugar-maple, mulberry, elm, ash, cotton-wood, white thorn, & an abundance of grape vines. The country in the south-west part of the state, between Green & Cumberland rivers, is called the "barrens." In 1800, the legislature of the state made a gratuitous grant of this tract to actual settlers, under the impression that it was of little value, but it proves to be excellent grain land, & also adapted to the raising of cattle & swine. The whole state below the mountains, has at the usual depth of eight feet, a bed of limestone which has frequent apertures through which the waters of the rivers sink into the earth, causing some of them to disappear for a time, & others to be greatly diminished in the summer season. The rivers have generally worn deep channels in the calcareous rocks over which they flow. The precipices formed by the Kentucky are in many places stupendous, presenting perpendicular banks of solid limestone 300 feet high, above which is a steep & difficult ascent several times as high. In the south-west part of the state, between Green & Cumberland rivers, are several remarkable caves. One called the Manmoth Cave, 130 miles from Lexington, on the road to Nashville, has been explored for a distance of eight or ten miles. Iron ore & coal are widely diffused, coal especially occupies an extensive field. Salt springs are numerous, & mineral springs are found in many localities. There were in this state in 1850, 5,968,270 acres of land improved, & 10,981,478 of unimproved land in farms; cash value of farms, $155,031,262 & the value of implements & machinery, $5,169,037; live stock, horses, 315,682; asses & mules, 65,609; milch cows, 247,475; working oxen, 62,274; other cattle, 442,763; sheep, 1,102,091; swine, 2,891,163; value of live stock, $29,661,436.

Agricultural products, &c.—Wheat, 2,142,822 bush.; rye, 415,073; Ind. corn, 58,672,591; oats, 8,201,311; barley, 55,343; buckwheat, 16,097; peas & beans, 202,574; potatoes, 1,492,487; sweet potatoes, 998,179; value of products of the orchard, $106,230; produce of market gardens, $303,120; pounds of butter made, 9,947,528; of cheese, 213,954; sugar, 284 hhds; maple sugar, 487,405 pounds; molasses, 30,079 gallons; bees wax & honey, 1,158,019 pounds; wool, pounds produced, 2,297,423; cotton, 758; flax, 2,100,116; silk cocoons, 1,201; hops, 4,309 pounds; tobacco, 55,501,196; hay, tons of, 113,747; hemp, 16,432 tons; clover seeds, 3,230 bushels; other grass seeds, 21,481, flax seed, 75,891 bushels; & were made 8,093 gallons of wine; value of slaughtered animals, $6,462,598.

The Ohio river, by its various windings, borders this state on the north for 637 miles. Cumberland & Tennessee rivers pass through its western part as they approach their entrance into the Ohio. Cumberland rises in the eastern part of this state. The Big Sandy is 250 miles long, & for a considerable distance forms the boundary between this state & Virginia. It is navigable fifty miles for boats. The Kentucky river rises in the Cumberland Mountains, & after a course generally through a deep rocky bed, falls into the Ohio seventy-seven miles above Louisville. It is navigable for steamboats 60 miles to Frankfort. Licking, Green, & Salt, are other considerable rivers. The Mississippi runs on the western border. Tonnage of the state, January, 1853, 12,166, composed entirely of steamboats.

Manufactures, &c.—There were in this state in 1850, 8 cotton factories, with a capital invested of $541,000, employing 206 males & 307 females, producing 1,078,034 yards of sheeting, &c., & 725,000 pounds of yarn, valued at $440,095; 27 woollen factories, with a capital of $260,320, employing 289 males & 81 females, manufacturing 878,034 yards of cloth, valued at $424,544; 24 establishments making pig iron, with a capital of $1,027,500, employing 1,922 persons, producing 28,609 tons of pig iron, &c., the entire value of products, $629,937; 20 establishments, with a capital of $502,200, employing 578 persons, & making 5,888 tons of castings, &c., valued at $744,316; 4 establishments, with a capital of $176,000, employing 183 persons in manufacturing 3,070 tons of wrought iron, valued at $299,790; 320 flouring & grist mills, 362 saw mills, & 390 tanneries; 51 printing offices, 9 daily, 5 tri-weekly, 2 semi-weekly, 38 weekly, 1 semi-monthly, & 7 monthly publications, total copies printed annually, 6,582,828.

The principal places in the state are Frankfort, the capital, Lexington, Covington, Newport, Maysville, Augusta, Harrodsburg, Danville, Bardstown, & Louisville. There were in this state Jan. 1853, 33 banks, with a capital of $10,620,000. There were in operation Jan. 1854, 233 miles of railroad, & 452 miles in course of construction.

Religion, &c.—There were in the state in 1850, 803 Baptist churches, 111 Christian, 19 Episcopal, 34 Free, 1 Jewish, 5 Lutheran, 530 Methodist, 224 Presbyterian, 48 Roman Catholic, 1 Tunker, 30 Union, 1 Unitarian, 7 Universalist, & 31 other sects, the whole having 1,845 churches; total value of church property, $2,252,448.

Education, &c.—Transylvania University at Lexington, St. Joseph's college at Bardstown, Centre college at Danville, Augusta college at Augusta, Georgetown college at Georgetown, Bacon college at Harrodsburg, Western Military Institute at Drennon Springs, Shelby college at Shelbyville, Western Baptist Theological Institute at Covington, Medical Department of Transylvania University at Lexington, Medical Department University of Louisville at Louisville, Transylvania University Law School at Lexington, & University of Louisville & Law School at Louisville. These institutions had in 1850, 1,873 students. There were also 330 academies, 12,712 pupils; 2,234 schools, 71,429 scholars. Capital of common school fund, $1,225,768 42. There were in the state 80 libraries, aggregate number of vols. 79,466. The Kentucky Asylum for the instruction of the deaf & dumb is at Danville; the institution for the blind at Louisville; lunatic asylums at Lexington and Hopkinsville; marine hospitals at Louisville & at Smithland; & the State penitentiary is at Frankfort.

Government, &c.—The governor is elected for four years, by a plurality of votes, by the people, & is ineligible for two consecutive terms. If the office become vacant before the expiration of two years of the term, a new election takes place. A lieutenant governor is elected at the same time, who is president of the senate, & who, in case of the death or absence of the governor, succeeds to his duties. The senators, 38 in number, are elected for four years, one half biennially. The representatives, 100 in number, are chosen every two years, & apportioned every eight years among the counties, according to the number of electors. Every free white male citizen who is 21 years of age, & has resided two years in the state, or in the county in which he offers his vote one year preceding the election, & in the precinct where he offers his vote 60 days, has the right of suffrage. Votes are given openly, viva voce, & not by ballot. The judges, 4 in number, of the supreme courts, are elected for 8 years—1 every two years. There are 12 judicial districts for circuit courts, each of which elects a judge every 6 years, for a term of 6 years. The judges of county courts are elected for 4 years.

Kentucky was first explored by Daniel Boone, an enterprising hunter, in 1770. The first white family settled near Lexington in 1775. The entire territory was constituted a county of Virginia in 1776. It became a separate territory in 1790, & was admitted into the Union in June, 1792. The first constitution was adopted in 1790, a second in 1799, & the third, & present, June 11th, 1850.

KENTUCKY, r., Ky., from which the state derives its name, rises by 3 principal branches in the Cumberland mountains, denominated the North, Middle and South Forks, which unite in Estill co. From this point it pursues a circuitous course, in its lower parts, generally N.N.W., until it enters Ohio r. at Carrollton. The distance from the mouth to the forks, is 260 m. by the course of the r.; but is only 112 m. in a direct line. Steamboats of 300 tons formerly navigated this r. to Frankfort, in time of high water. But the navigation from the mouth to the forks of the r. has been improved at a cost of about 2½ millions of dolls. There has been constructed 17 dams, creating pools, & 17 locks, connecting them. The dams are from 350 to 500 feet long, & from 20 to 25 feet high, and the locks are 178 feet long & 38 ft. wide, & the least depth through the whole course is 6 feet, so that boats of a less draft than this can navigate it at all times. The difference of level overcome by the locks, is 210 feet.

KILDARE, an inland co. of Ireland, Leinster, having N. Meath, E. the cos. Dublin & Wicklow, S. Carlow, & W. King's & Queen's cos. Area, 653 sq. m., or 418,436 ac., of which about 50,000 are comprised in the bog of Allen. Inhabited houses 1851, 15,866. Pop. 96,627. Surface mostly flat. Chief rivers, the Boyne, Barrow, & Liffey. Climate moist, owing to the prevalence of bogs. Soil mostly a deep & fertile loam; & the Curragh of Kildare, a tract in its centre, is scarcely to be matched for the excellence of its turf & rich verdure. Chief crops, wheats, oats, & barley. The best English breeds of cattle have been introduced. Many estates are large, & farms less subdivided than in most other Irish counties, but farming is very backward. Minerals & manufs. unimportant. The principal trade is in corn & flour, the export of which is facilitated by the river Barrow, & Royal & Grand canals & their branches, which connect the co. with Dublin, Waterford, & the Shannon. A good deal of peat is sent from the co. to Dublin. The Great S. & Western r. r. intersects the co. Kildare. The co. contains 10 baronies & 113 pas. in the dioceses of Kildare & Dublin. Principal towns, Athy, Kildare, & Naas. It sends 2 mems. to H. of C. Kildare has since 1316 given title to the Fitzgeralds, now Dukes of Leinster. —Kildare, a market town, episcopal see, & pa., in above co., on the Great S. & W. r. r., 30 m. W.S.W. Dublin. Pop. of pa. 2,654; do. of town, 1,629. It stands on an elevated plain, about ½ m. from the common, or curragh, & consists mostly of cabins, intermixed with ancient edifices. It suffers greatly from want of water. KILKENNY, t., Coos co., N. H., 106 N. Concord, 575 W. Chartered in 1744, but being a mountainous region, with little land that invites cultivation, it has been little settled. The wild animals of the forest hold the chief possession. It has a school. Pop. 1840, 19; 1850, not returned.

KILKENNY, a inland co. of Ireland, Leinster, having N. Queen's co., E. the cos. Carlow & Wexford, S. & S.W. Waterford, & W. Tipperary. Area about 790 sq. ms., or 508,811 ac., of which about 21,000 are uncultivated, & 18,000 in woods. Inhabited houses 1851, 23,435. Pop. 139,944, nearly all Rom. Catholics. Surface slightly undulating, with a slope towards the S.; several summits, however, rise to upwards of 1,000 ft. in elevation. Chief rivers, the Nore, Barrow, & Suir. Soils various, but for the most part light fertile loams resting on limestone, gravel, &c., & presenting a much less proportion of bog than in most parts of Ireland. Climate drier & crops earlier than in the average of Irish cos. Agriculture improving. The usual corn crops form the chief object of the farmer, but dairy & sheep farms are also numerous. The breeds of stock are mostly native. Estates generally large; farms small. Average rent of land 17*s.* an acre; this being one of the highest rented cos. in Irel'd. Anthracite coal abounds; fine black marble is also found. The manufs. of woollens & linens, which long flourished here, have now materially declined. The principal export is grain. Two opposing lines of r. r. intersect this co.; & navigable rivers & the Grand canal furnish facilities for transport to all parts of Ireland. Kilkenny is divided into 9 baronies & 127 pas., in the dioceses of Ossory, Leighlin, & Cashel. It sends 3 membs. to H. of C.; 2 for the co. & 1 for its chief town. It gives title of Earl to the Butler family.

KIRGHIZ COUNTRY, or STEPPE, an extensive region in Central Asia, embracing all the N. part of Turkestan between lat. 44° & 55° N., & lon. 53° & 82° E., partly independent & partly comprised in the Russian govs. Orenburg & Tomsk, having E. the Chinese Empire, W. the Caspian Sea, & S. the khanats, khokan, Bokhara, & Khiva. Estimated area 1,533,000 sq. ms., & pop. 2,260,000 (Levchine). Surface traversed by many mountain chains, but it chiefly consists of barren plains, abounding in salt lakes, some upwards of 100 m. in length, & into which the principal rivers pour themselves. Climate remarkable for variability, and destructive hurricanes are frequent. The pop. is almost wholly nomadic, & rude in the extreme, their principal occupation being the rearing of sheep, goats, horses, & camels. Some land on river-banks, however, is roughly tilled, for millet, rye, & barley, especially in the S. or Kara-kalpack country; & seals, sturgeons, &c., are taken in the lakes. Some domestic weaving, & manufs. of hair cordage, soap, leather, & iron wares, are carried on; but this region may be considered as preeminently the head-quarters of barbarism in Asia, nearly all manufactured goods & necessaries being derived from the adjacent countries in exchange for cattle, hides, horns, & wool. The Kirghiz are of the Mongol race, & separated into the so-named Great, Little, & Middle hordes, who are again subdivided into numerous tribes, each having its own khan or chief. Their religion is a compound of Islamism & idolatry. No towns exist in their territory, & the apparent remains of any such, or of temples, are certainly the vestiges of a previous race of inhabitants, much more advanced in civilization than the present occupants.

LAKES, commerce of, (Andrews' Report). The coast line embraced in this report includes both shores of Lake Champlain, with which it commences (discharging its waters into the St. Lawrence by the Sorel or Richelieu river,) the southern bank of the river St. Lawrence, Lake Ontario, the Niagara river, & Lake Erie, to the dividing line between New York & Pennsylvania; thence the southern coast of Lake Erie to the Pennsylvania & Ohio line; thence the south-western coast of the same lake to the Michigan line; and thence the whole southern banks of the Detroit river, St. Clair lake & river, the western coast of Lake Huron, along the southern peninsula of Michigan, the whole coasts of Lake Michigan, including the shores of Illinois, Ohio, Wisconsin, & Michigan, & all the southern & south-western coast line of Lake St. George, the river St. Mary's, & Lake Superior, including the shores of northern Michigan, Wisconsin, & Minnesota, to the frontier of the British possessions at the outlet of Rainy lake & Lake of the Woods into the waters of Lake Superior. The extent of the whole line exceeds three thousand miles in length, & embraces portions of the following States, several of them the wealthiest of the entire Union: Vermont, New York, Pennsylvania, Ohio, Michigan, Indiana, Illinois, Wisconsin, & the Minnesota Territory, on the one side: while the lakes open to our commerce on the other a coast line of nearly equal extent, & in some parts of hardly inferior fertility, on the Canadian shore. The lakes themselves, with their statistics of measurement, are as follows:—

LAKES.	Greatest length. Miles.	Greatest breadth. Miles	Mean Depth. Feet.	Elevation. Feet.	Area. Square Miles.
Superior	355	160	900	627	32,000

Ontario.....	180	35	500	232	6,300
Total	1,555	....	....	....	90,000

These lakes are estimated to drain an entire area of 335,515 square miles, & discharge their waters into the ocean through the river St. Lawrence, which is rendered navigable from Lake Erie downward to all vessels not exceeding 130 feet keel, 26 beam, & 10 feet draught, & the free navigation of which for American bottoms may, it is anticipated, be acquired by the concession of reciprocity of trade to the Canadian government. The whole traffic of these great waters may be now unhesitatingly stated at $326,000,000, employing 74,000 tons of steam, & 138,000 tons of sail, for the year 1851, of 215,000 tons burden.

The following table, taken from a very valuable report by Messrs. Mansfield & Gallagher, of the statistics & steam marine of the United States for 1851, will show the comparative force of the steamers employed in the oceanic & the lake trade, & will exhibit a result sufficiently surprising to readers unacquainted with the business of the interior.

The entire number of vessels & crews of the interior trade amounts to 140 bottoms, & 5,837 men, in excess of the whole ocean & coast navy, though the tonnage employed in the latter is smaller by 7,775 tons.

However remote the period of the discovery, exploration & partial colonization of these wilds & waters, anything like practical navigation of them for commercial purposes was unattempted until after the commencement of this century. In 1679 a French craft indeed was launched at Erie, Pennsylvania, for the expedition of the celebrated & unfortunate La Salle; but this, which was an experiment for a special purpose, wholly unconnected with trade, was not followed up. In 1797, the first American vessel was launched on the lakes. In 1816 the first steamer was built on the waters of Lake Ontario, & the first on Lake Erie in 1818. For some considerable time the first vessels put in commission on Lake Erie were used merely for facilitating the movements & operations of the Indian traders, carrying westward supplies & trinkets for the trade, & returning with cargoes of furs & peltries. In 1825 the Erie canal was completed, & its influence began at once to be felt through the western country. The western portion of the State of New York immediately began to assume an air of civilization, & to advance in commercial growth. This influence continued still to increase until the Welland canal & the Ohio canals were completed. The tonnage, which had then increased to about 20,000 tons, found at this time full employment in carrying emigrants & their supplies westward, which continued to be their principal trade till 1835, when Ohio began to export breadstuffs & provisions to a small extent. In 1800 Ohio had 45,000 inhabitants; in 1810, 230,760; in 1820, 581,434; in 1830, 937,903. During this year a portion of the canals was opened, & during the ten years next ensuing after 1830, some five hundred miles of canals had been completed, connecting the lakes by two lines with the Ohio. Under the influence of these improvements, the population of the state augmented to 1,519,467 individuals. In 1835 she exported by the lakes the equivalent of 548,815 bushels of wheat. In 1840 her exports of the same article over the same waters were equivalent to 3,800,000 bushels of wheat, being an increase, in the space of five years, in the articles of wheat & flour, of what is equal to 3,200,000 bushels of wheat, or nearly six hundred per centum. These articles are selected, as being the most bulky, in order to illustrate the effect of canals upon lake commerce. At this period, 1840, there were not completed over two hundred miles of railroad in the state, & this distance was composed of broken portions of roads, no entire route existing as yet across the length or breadth of the state. In 1850, there were in operation something over four hundred miles of railroad, & rather a greater length of canals, while the population had increased to 1,998,408, & her exports, by lake, of wheat & flour, were equivalent to 5,754,075 bushels of wheat, & that, too, in spite of the fact that the crop of 1849 was almost an absolute failure throughout the West. In 1851, the exports of wheat & flour, by lake, were equivalent to no less than 12,193,202 bushels of wheat; & the cost of freight & shipping charges on this amount of produce falls little, if any, short of $510,000; nearly the whole amount having reached the lakes via the canals & railroads of Ohio.

Similar sketches of the other north-western states, during their rise & advancement to their present condition of prosperity, & influence on the confederation, might be adduced in this place, all equally flattering to the energy & enterprise of the western people, & to the influence of internal improvement on commerce; but this narrative of the eldest state of the group will suffice to illustrate the subject, & give some idea of the unexampled progress of the whole. Westward of Ohio the Wabash canal brings the vast productions of Indiana to the lakes, passing through a small portion of Ohio, from the port of Toledo to the junction, thence to Evansville, on the Ohio river, & traversing the entire length of the Wabash valley, one of the finest wheat & corn countries in all the West. This canal is four hundred & sixty-four miles in length, & is one of the most important of recent improvements. It is worthy of note here, that in addition to its vast commercial business by the great lakes, Ohio, & more particularly its commercial capital, Cincinnati, the largest, wealthiest, & finest city of the west, & the great emporium of that region, has an immense commerce, both in exports & imports, by the rivers Ohio & Mississippi; & it appears that a larger portion of groceries are imported for the use of the interior, into Cincinnati, by the river, than to the lake-board, via the lakes; and further, that while a much larger portion of the trade in cereal produce goes by the lakes, a majority of the live stock & animal provisions is sent by the rivers or otherwise. No ill effect is produced, however, on either commercial route, by this competition, but rather the reverse, there being times when either route alone is closed to navigation—the lakes during the winter by the ice, & the Ohio by the failure of its waters during the summer droughts. There is, moreover, commerce enough amply to sustain both channels; & while the State, its beautiful capital in particular, is a great gainer, no port or place of business is a loser by this two-fold avenue & outlet for commercial transportation. The southern Michigan & northern Indiana railroad terminates both at Toledo, Ohio, & at Monroe, Michigan, on the lakes, & runs westward, through the southern counties of Michigan & the northern counties of Indiana, to Chicago, at the head of Lake Michigan, on the eastern border of Illinois. This road passes through some of the most fertile portions of these states, & being recently completed through its entire length, may be confidently looked to as sure to add greatly to the commerce of the lakes at its termini. Further to the northward, on the Detroit river, the central Michigan railroad communicates across the peninsula, from the city of Detroit, with New Buffalo & the lake; and, having been open some years, has done more to develop the matchless resources of this State, & to urge it forward to its present commanding position, than any one other route. Cities, villages, & large flouring mills are springing into existence everywhere along the line of this road, depending upon it as the avenue of their business to the lakes. The Pontiac railroad & many plank roads connect various other points of the interior, & are vastly beneficial to the commerce of the lakes. Following the line of the lakes westward, Lake Huron may be passed over, as presenting no internal improvements worthy of note. One of the principal of those which are already projected, is the extension of the Pontiac railroad to Saginaw, touching at a point on the St. Clair river, opposite to Sarnia, Canada West, where it is destined to communicate with a branch of the great western railroad from Hamilton, on Lake Ontario, to Lake Huron. Another road is also projected in Canada, from Toronto, across the peninsula, by Lake Simcoe, to Penetanguishine, on the great Georgian bay, which will shorten the route to the Sault Ste. Marie, by many hundred miles, &, when the ship-canal around the Sault is finished, will tend more largely than any other improvement to develop and bring to a market the incalculable mineral resources of Lake Superior. Southward of Lake Superior, and bordering on the western shore of Lake Michigan, lies the upper or northern peninsula of Michigan, & the northern portion of Wisconsin, little known as yet, except to lumbermen, trappers, traders & voyagers, and naturally hitherto the theatre of no internal improvements tributary to the commerce of the lakes. Passing southward, however, to Green bay, & its sources in the interior of Wisconsin, there are lately completed some improvements in the internal navigation of that state, which are, perhaps, of more importance to the future growth of the lake commerce than any yet perfected in any part of the State. These are the works on the Fox river, &·the canal connecting the waters of that stream with the Wisconsin, which opens the steam navigation of the lakes to river craft, & vice versâ, although it is scarcely probable that the same vessels which navigate the lakes will pass through the rivers. This, in fact, is by no means necessary to the success of the project, the importance of which is found in the fact, that by it the steam route from the Atlantic to the upper valley of the Mississippi is incredibly shortened; & thereby the whole trade, springing into existence throughout that vast upper country, is, in a great degree, rendered tributary to the lakes. The junction of the Wisconsin & Mississippi rivers is, in fact, by this route, brought nearer to the lakes than to St. Louis; & the transportation of goods being by an uninterrupted line of steamboat navigation throughout the whole chain of lakes & across the state of Wisconsin, the trade to be one day transacted by this route will be enormous. The richness of the soil of Wisconsin in the valleys of the rivers, & on the borders of Lake Winnebago, is rarely surpassed or equalled, & towns containing from one to three thousand inhabitants are everywhere springing into existence through her territories, which are probably destined to become, in a few years, great commercial cities. Southward of this route there are no very important channels of communication tributary to the lakes until we reach Chicago, where Lake Michigan is connected with the Illinois river by a canal of 100 miles in length, opening to that lake the vast wealth & traffic of the richest corn valley in the known world.

Railroads are also projected from Milwaukie, one of which is completed some forty miles to the westward, which is destined to extend to the Mississippi. There are also plank roads from many points, more or less useful as avenues of commerce to the lakes: at present, however, the only communication between the northern & southern routes is by the Illinois & Michigan canal. This was originally intended to be a ship canal, connecting Chicago with Peru, on the Illinois river, but was only constructed equal to the admission of ordinary canal boats, which can, on reaching the latter point, be towed by steam down the river to St. Louis, & return thence laden with sugar, hemp, tobacco, flour or grain, & thence by horse power to Chicago. Whether the original plan of this canal will ever be carried out, is at best very problematical, since there are obstacles in the periodical shallowness of the waters of the Illinois which would frustrate the only object of the improvement, to wit, the through-navigation of the works by lake craft. This canal was opened in May, 1848, & the first section of the Chicago & Galena railroad in March, 1849. In 1847, the year previous to the opening of the canal, the real estate & personal property in Cook county, of which Chicago is the capital, was valued at $6,189,385, & the State tax was $18,162. In the year following, when the canal had been one season in operation, the valuation rose to $6,986,000, & the State tax to $25,848. In 1851, this valuation had risen yet farther to the sum of $9,431,826, & the State tax to $56,937. In 1840 the population of Chicago was 4,479, & the valuation of property not far from $250,000; while in 1851 the population was about 36,000, & the assessed valuation of real & personal property was $8,562,717. In 1847, the population, according to the city census, was 16,859; in 1848, it was 20,023; in 1849, 23,047; & in 1850, according to the United States census, 29,963; having increased twice more rapidly than before, since the completion of the canal. The population of Chicago at this time—August, 1852—is nearly, if not quite, 40,000.

In regard to this train of argument, & to this view of the effect of internal improvements on the growth of the West, & on the commercial condition of that portion of the country, it will be well to follow up the same train of examination in relation to the growth of certain points to the east of the great lakes, such as Buffalo, New York, Oswego, Boston, & other cities directly affected by the same commerce, through the internal channels of communication in New York & Massachusetts. In 1800, the city of New York, with its suburbs, had a population of 63,000; in 1850, 700,000; Boston, 38,000—1850, 212,000; Philadelphia city and co. 73,000—1850, 450,000; Cincinnati 750—1850, 115,436; Buffalo, 1850, 42,260; Oswego, 1850, 12,205; Albany, 5,349—1850, 50,763; Chicago, 1850, 29,963; St. Louis, 2,000—1850, 77,860. Hence, it appears, that between the years 1800 & 1850, the population of New York & its suburbs doubled itself once in every 16 years; Boston, once in every 25½; Philadelphia, in every 20; Cincinnati, in every 6½; Albany, in every 15; St. Louis, in every 9¼ years. This covers a term of half a century; but from 1810 to 1850, a period of 40 years, the population of New York doubled itself once in every 15 years; Philadelphia, in 18¼; Boston, in 18¼; Albany, in 16; Cincinnati, in 7; St. Louis, in 9¼; Buffalo, in 8¼, & Detroit in 8¼. From 1820 to 1850, a period of thirty years, the population of New York doubled once in 13 years: Philadelphia, in 16; Boston, 15; Albany, 15½; Cincinnati, 7½; St. Louis, 7; Buffalo, 6¼; Detroit, 8. From 1830 to 1850, a period of twenty years, the term of duplication—this being the first census taken after the opening of the Erie canal, but before its influence had been much felt on the seaboard, owing to the non-completion of the Ohio & lateral canals—was, in New York, 15 years; Philadelphia, 17½; Boston, 20; Albany, 20; Cincinnati, 8½; St. Louis, 5½; Buffalo, 8½; Detroit, 6; Cleveland, 5; & Sandusky, 5. And from 1840 to 1850—a period of ten years, during which nearly the whole western population had become exporters by means of the Ohio, New York, and Philadelphia canals, & the various lines of railroad—the effect of these influences on the period of duplication in the cities of Boston, Philadelphia, & New York, has been truly astonishing; but the same influence, reacting & reflected from the East upon the western cities is yet more wonderful. According to the ratio of their increase during these ten years, New York would double her population in 12 years; Boston in 12; Philadelphia, in 12½; Baltimore, in 13½; Albany, in 16½; Cincinnati, in 6; St. Louis, in 4; Buffalo, in 8½; Detroit, in 9; Cleveland, 6½; Sandusky, 5½; Chicago, 4; Milwaukie, 3½; Toledo, 6; Oswego, 8.

Hence it appears, that every new improvement is bound by inevitable laws to pay its tribute to some great channel of internal commerce. The existence of such a channel has indirectly created the necessity for the improvement; & the same law which called it into existence as necessarily requires it, by a reactionary impulse, to indemnify its creator.

This is a brief & rapid outline of a country, & a system of waters, strangely adapted by the hand of Providence to become the channel of an inland navigation, unequalled & incomparable the world over; through regions the richest of the whole earth in productions of all kinds—productions of the field, productions of the forest, productions of the waters, productions of the bowels of the earth—regions overflowing with cereal & animal wealth, abounding in the most truly valuable, if not most precious, metals & minerals—lead, iron, copper, coal—beyond the most favored countries of the globe; regions which would, but for these waters, have been as inaccessible as the steppes of Tartary or Siberia, & the value of the productions whereof must have been swallowed up in the expense of their transportation. And this country, these waters, hitherto so little regarded, so singularly neglected, the importance of which does not appear to be so much as suspected by one man in ten thousand of the citizens of this great republic, is certainly destined to excel in absolute & actual wealth, agricultural, mineral, & commercial, the aggregate of the other portions of the United States, how thrifty, how thriving, how energetical & industrious soever they may be. Of these lakes & rivers, during the year 1851, the commerce, foreign & coastwise, was estimated at three hundred & twenty-six millions five hundred & ninety-three thousand three hundred & thirty-five dollars; transacted by means of an enrolled tonnage of seventy-seven thousand & sixty-one tons of sseam, & one hundred & thirty-eight thousand nine hundred & fourteen tons of sail, or an aggregate licensed tonnage of two hundred & fifteen thousand nine hundred & seventy-five tons. In the prosecution of this commerce, it would appear, as nearly as can be ascertained, that there was entered an aggregate at all the lake ports together, of 9,469,506 tons during the season; & cleared at the same ports 9,456,346 tons—showing an average of nearly forty-four entrances of the whole lake tonnage during the season. Of the above amount of commerce the value of $314,473,458 went coastwise, & $12,119,877 Canadian or foreign. The returns of the coasting trade are, it is true, very imperfect & unsatisfactory, as are also the estimates founded upon them; but, as approximations only can be arrived at under the circumstances, the best use has been made of the returns received; & the results arrived at cannot but appear strange to those not immediately conversant with the character of the lake trade. According to these estimates the coasting trade is divided into exports, $132,017,470; & imports, $182,455,988; showing a difference of $50,438,518, when there should have been a perfect balance. This discrepancy arises from a higher rate of valuation at the place of importation than at that of exportation, or vice versâ. Products of agriculture, the forests, & the mines, are easily valued at a correct rate; whereas one great division of articles of importation, classed as merchandise, including everything from the finest jewelry & choicest silks to the most bulky & cheapest articles of grocery, can scarcely be reduced to a correct money value. The discrepancy, then, arises from the valuation of the articles per ton being fixed at too high a figure at one port, or too low at another. Which valuation is the more correct, it is impossible to ascertain under the present system of regulations. Taking the lowest estimate, the actual money value of the coastwise exports of these lakes is $132,000,000, in round numbers, being the mere value of the property passing over the lakes, without including passage money, passengers carried, cost of vessels, expenses of crews, or anything in the least degree extraneous. The amount of grain alone which was transported during the season of 1851, amounted to 1,962,729 barrels of flour, and 8,119,169 bushels of wheat—amounting to what equals an aggregate of 17,932,807 bushels of wheat; 7,495,264 bushels of corn; 1,591,758 bushels of oats; & 360,172 bushels of barley; in all, 27,382,801 bushels of cereal produce. This branch of traffic, it is evident, must continually increase with the increasing influx of immigration, & the bringing into cultivation of the almost unbounded tracts of the very richest soil, on which the forest is now growing, which surround the lakes on almost every side. And the like may be predicated of the exploration of the mines, the prosecution of the fisheries, & the bringing to light of all natural resources —facilities of transportation causing immigration, immigration improving cultivation & production, & these two originating commerce, & multiplying a thousandfold the wealth, the rank, & the happiness of the confederacy.

Gavin Hamilton the painter was born here.—New Lanark is a vill. in the above pa., on the Clyde, here crossed by a bridge, 1 m. S. Lanark. Pop. 1,542, employed in extensive cotton works, founded by the philanthropic David Dale in 1784; & the regulations in which, as respects hours of labor, cleanliness, morals, and education, have excited universal admiration. Robert Owen's first attempts to establish a new system of social organization were made here.

LANARK, a co. of W. Australia, betw. lat. 35° & 36° S., & about lon. 116° E., bounded S. & W. by the ocean.

LANARKSHIRE, or CLYDESDALE, an inland co. of Scotland, having N. the cos. Dumbarton & Stirling, E. Linlithgow, Edinburghshire, & Peebles, S. Dumfries, & W. the cos. Ayr & Renfrew. Area, 987 sq. ms., or 631,719 ac., more than one-third part of which is arable. Inhabited houses 1851, 87,504. Pop. 530,-169. It consists of the whole upper basin of the Clyde, and its affls., along which, & in the level or N. parts, are some fine agricultural tracts; the "middle ward" of the county is undulating, and the "upper ward" or S. part mountainous & sterile, one summit rising to 3,100 feet, & several others to between 2,500 & 3,000 feet above the sea. Chief crops, oats, barley, wheat, turnips, & potatoes. In the middle ward orchards are numerous. Pastures are extensive in the uplands. The breed of draught horses is among the best in Scotland. Agriculture greatly advanced of late; estates mostly large; farms of all sizes, & farm buildings of the best class. The coal, iron, & lead mines of this co. have rendered it one of the most wealthy in Britain. In Old Monkland, especially, there are extensive iron works, & all kinds of manufs. are carried on in and around Glasgow in the lower ward, besides which city, the co. comprises the towns Lanark, Hamilton, Airdrie, Kilbride, Carluke, Douglas, & Biggar. It sends, bors. included, 4 members to H. of C.

LANBABO, a pa. of North Wales, co. Anglesey, 3 m. N.W. Llanerch-y-mydd.

LANCASHIRE, a marit. & palatine co., of England, having N. Cumberland & Westmoreland, E. Yorkshire, S. Cheshire, & W. the Irish Sea, an arm of which running up into co. Westmoreland, divides it into two unequal parts. Area, 1,905 sq. ms., or 1,219,221 ac., of which about 850,000 are estimated to be grass and arable. Inhabited houses, 349,938. Pop. 1831, 1,336,-854; do. 1841, 1,667,054; 1851, 2,031,236. Surface rugged & mountainous in the N., where Coniston Fell rises to 2,577 feet above the sea, & on the E. border, where the long ridge, popularly called "The Backbone of England," separates the co. from York; elsewhere generally level. Often deficient in trees, & in a few parts containing extensive bogs or mosses. Principal rivers, the Duddon, Lune, Wyre, Ribble, Mersey, and Irwell. Besides Coniston Lake, Windermere is partly in this co. Climate mild, but one of the most humid in England. Carboniferous sandstone & new red sandstone, with limestone, form the strata of the co. Soil among the hills moorish or peaty, in the lower district mostly a tolerably fertile sandy loam. Agriculture comparatively backward. Potatoes more extensively grown than in any other English co. Dairy and hay farms more numerous than arable. Horticulture is pursued on a large scale near the towns. Estates, with some exceptions, small. Tillage farms rather small, & held on short leases. The most important mineral is coal, to the abundance of which the co. mainly owes its manufacturing eminence. The Lancashire coal-field is estimated to extend over nearly 400 sq. ms. Copper is also raised in the N. of the co. For some notice of the immense cotton, & other manufs. of this co., which are doubtless the most extensive & important on the globe, & for the vast commerce which, notwithstanding the inferior character of the harbors, these manufs. create, see the articles on its chief towns, Manchester, Preston, Bolton, Oldham, Wigan, Bury, Clitheroe, Ashton, Warrington, Rochdale, Blackburn, Chorley, Lancaster, & Liverpool. Numerous railroads connect these towns with the manufacturing districts of Yorkshire, & all other parts of England & Scotland, as do the Bridgewater, Leeds, & Liverpool, and numerous other canals. It is the principal seat of the cotton manufacture in England. The following table shows the number of cotton, woollen, & other factories, in 1850:

Materials.	Factories.	Spindles.	Power looms.
Cotton	1,235	13,955,497	176,947

LA UNION, or CONCHAGUA BAY, St. Salvador, C. A., is a fine sheet of water, forms a part of the Bay Fonseca, possessing an anchorage of from 3 to 12 fathoms, free from shoals, & well protected from all winds, being a near approach to a circle, & about 10 miles in diameter. It is surrounded on three sides by high land, & the entrance is protected by a number of islands, with many deep and safe channels, only one of which is at present used by ships entering & leaving, although many of the others are, no doubt, equally good, & would be quite as available if surveyed. The port of the Union is by far the best in the State of San Salvador. On the opposite side of the Gulf of Fonseca, is the port of San Lorenzo, in Honduras, the above state being here bounded, for a short distance, by the waters of the Pacific ocean. The port is safe and convenient, & of easy access; but, as nearly all the commerce of this state is carried on by the Atlantic coast, it is but little resorted to by vessels. Port of Realejo, in the state of Nicaragua, which is said to be as good a harbor as any on the Pacific coast. The entrance is protected by an island about 2 miles long, which leaves, at each end, a channel where ships can enter the bay or harbor; but extending opposite the main land, forming the port in such a manner as to protect it entirely from any wind that can possibly blow, and also entirely breaking the swell which enters the outer bay from the ocean. The N. entrance is about a quarter of mile wide, & that at the S. of the island rather narrower, both being entirely free from rocks or hidden dangers, and having in no part less than 4 fathoms water. At one of these openings, vessels can at all times enter with a leading wind from whatever quarter it may blow. The inside consists of a noble basin of water, nowhere less than 3 or 4 fathoms deep, with a bottom of mud, where 200 ships of the line might lie at all times in the most perfect security. Merchant vessels generally lie about a mile from the entrance, in the branch of the creek which runs up to Realejo, where there are about 5 fathoms water over a mud bottom. Opposite this port there is a fine level beach, possessing deep water close to the edge, which would form an admirable site for a town; & where, at very little expense, a wharf might be constructed capable of accommodating almost any number of vessels. Were proper batteries erected on the rocky island at the entrance, no enemy could possibly enter, for, if required, a chain could also be extended across each of the two mouths. One of the branches of this creek extends inland to within 5 leagues of the Lake of Leon or Managua. The intermediate country is a gentle slope, where undoubtedly should enter one of the ends of the canal to connect the Pacific & Atlantic oceans, passing through lakes Managua & Nicaragua, & river St. John.

Ports on the Pacific side.—Commencing at the most Northerly part of the S.W. coast, the first of the ports upon the Pacific is Jaco, which is the only place in the province of the Altos ever visited by vessels. It is an open roadstead, where a landing is always effected with some difficulty, on account of the continual heavy surf breaking upon the shore. Iztapa, the port of Guatamala, on the Pacific, is little better than the foregoing; it is 25 leagues from the capital of that state, & the country is of such a nature that a passible road for carts might be made at little expense. A few vessels only visit Iztapa in the course of the year, and bulky goods, which will not bear the expense of carriage from Isabel, are sent there. About forty leagues to the eastward is the port of Acajutla, in the State of San Salvador, which is much superior to the foregoing, being sheltered from all winds except the S.W. Still there is always a heavy swell upon the beach, & the entire absence of a wharf makes landing somewhat difficult. Twenty leagues further along the coast, is the roadstead of Libertad, which is in all respects inferior to Acajutla, but has occasionally been made use of for embarking & disembarking bulky goods, as it is the nearest point along the coast to the city of San Salvador, from which it is only 12 leagues distant. Eight leagues further to the eastward is the Gulf of Fonseca or Conchagua, which contains several good harbors. The island of Tigre, in the above Gulf, contains the port of Amapala, which affords a good harbor for vessels of a large class.

LAWRENCE, city, Essex co., Mass., 26 N. Boston, on the Boston & Maine railroad, at the intersection of the Lowell & Lawrence, the Essex, the Manchester & Lawrence, & Portsmouth r. r. It is divided into two nearly equal parts by the Merrimack river. The northern portion containing 2,050 acres, was formerly a part of Methuen; the southern portion containing 1,980 ac., was a part of Andover. The city was planned in 1845 by the "Essex Company," & began to be settled in the following year; it was incorporated as a town in 1847, & chartered as a city in 1853. Pop. in 1847, 3,577; in 1850, 8,358; in 1854, 15,000. The valuation of the property in 1847 was $1,700,000; in 1853 about $8,000,000. The Essex Company have built a fine granite dam across the Merrimack at a cost of $250,000; its length is 1,629 ft., of which the water fall occupies 900 ft. in the middle; the dam is 35 ft. thick at the base, by 12½ ft. at the top; the height of the water fall is from 25 to 27 ft. The amount of water passing over it is about 5,000 cubic ft. per second; in freshets it sometimes amounts to 60,000 ft. per second. Lake Winnepisiogee, in New Hampshire, is owned & used as a reservoir to equalize the supply of water in this city, & the manufacturing cities & towns above it; the surface of this reservoir covers 120 square miles. The water is used as yet only on the north side of the Merrimack; it is taken from above the dam by a canal one mile long, & running at a distance of 400 ft. from the river, leaving the intervening space for mill sites. An equal space will be obtained on the south side when needed. The following establishments are now completed:—Pacific Mill, makes barege & delaine goods; the main building is 806 ft. long by 75 ft. wide, & 6 stories high; the "outside building" is about one-fourth of a mile long. The Atlantic Cotton Mills, capital $1,800,000; motive power supplied by three iron turbine wheels of 300 horse power each. It employs about 1,000 persons, manufactures sheetings & shirtings. Bay State Mills, capital $1,800,000; has 93 carding machines, 650 looms, 2,300 operatives; make shawls, plaids, fine woollens, & felt carpets; wool used equals 12,000 lbs. of American per day. The motive power is obtained from seven wheels of 125 horse power each. Pemberton Mill has just commenced operation. Lawrence Duck Mill makes all kinds of cotton ducking. This mill, like all the others, is built of brick, & has a complement of extensive boarding houses of the same material. Lawrence Machine Shop, capital $750,000; makes all kinds of machinery & iron work from spindles to locomotives; a very extensive forge shop & foundry are connected with it; the buildings are all of stone, & cover several acres. Charter Paper Company.—This company have an extensive manufactory of paper hangings, drafting & engraving their own designs. Lawrence Gas Company, capital $85,000; supply all the mills, & many stores & dwellings, at from $3 to $3½ per M. ft. There are here also extensive saw mills, planing mills, a pianoforte manufactory, a machine card do., a carriage do., machine belt do., a machine shop & paper mill, & in which a large capital is invested in these & similar enterprises. About thirty railroad trains come into the city daily. Lawrence is connected by the magnetic telegraph with all parts of the country & British provinces. The public schools are of a high order; they are arranged in four grades, which extend from the simplest rudiments to a preparation for college; the system is under the charge of a superintendent, directed by the committee. The amount raised by tax for the support of schools, is upwards of six dollars for each child living in the city. There is various moral, benevolent & literary societies. There is a public library, mostly presented by Hon. Abbott Lawrence, for whose family the city was named. Various courses of lectures are delivered during the year. The city has a police court, a court of insolvency, & several terms of the common pleas & probate courts of the county. There is a county prison, built of granite, comprising all the modern improvements in prison architecture, erected at a cost of $80,000. The public buildings are a city hall, Lawrence Hall, Pantheon Hall;—12 churches, viz.—2 Baptist, 2 Congregational, 1 Christian Baptist, 1 Episcopal, 2 Methodist, 2 Roman Catholic, 1 Unitarian & 1 Universalist,—& there are a bank & 75 stores of various kinds. The "Lawrence Courier" is a large newspaper of extensive circulation; it commenced in the "new city" in 1846, before a brick was laid on a street constructed; it is at present a semi-weekly; from its columns most of the above statistics are compiled. The "Lawrence Sentinel" is a weekly, two years younger. Lawrence is prettily laid out in a very healthful situation, & has excellent municipal regulations. Its enterprising population is doubtless destined to increase in the same wonderful ratio as heretofore.

from its situation, is not salubrious; but great & effectual efforts have recently been made for its drainage; & water is distributed through it by an aqueduct from Colognole, 12 m. distant. The N. part of the city is intersected by canals, & comprises many wharfs and warehouses; the port is divided into an inner & outer harbor; the latter for vessels under 400 tons, is protected by a fine mole running upwards of ½ m. into the sea, near which is a lighthouse. The roadstead lies W.N.W. the harbor, & outside of it is the Melora sandbank, running 4 m. N. and S., about 4 m. from the shore; at its S. extremity stands the Melora tower, & on an isl., about 1 m. S., the lazaretto, esteemed one of the best in Europe. There were 221 vessels belonging to the port in 1850, aggregate tonnage 17,254 tons. The arrivals at the port in 1851, were 3,418 vessels, of which 23 were American. Leghorn has a considerable coral-fishery, manufs. of woollen caps, straw hats, glass, paper, soap, coral, & alabaster factories, rope walks, ship-building docks, tanneries, &c. It was made a free port by Cosmo de Medicis in the 16th cent., & to this circumstance it owes its chief prosperity. Exports comprise raw & manufactured silks, straw hats and plait, straw for plaiting, oil & fruits, borax, cheese, anchovies, marble, & sulphur. Imports consist of colonial produce, raw cotton, cotton & woollen fabrics, hardware, metallic bars, earthenware, & salted fish. [Pisa.]

LEITH, a parl. bor. & seaport town of Scotland, co. & 2 m. N.E. of Edinburgh, on the river or Water of Leith, where it enters the Firth of Forth. Lat. of fort 55° 58′ 9″ N., lon. 3° 10′ 5″ W. Area of pas. 1,490 ac. Pop. of North & South parts, 1851, 33,418; do. of parl district, 1851, 30,919. The town of Leith communicates with, & its houses almost join to those of, Edinburgh by means of Leith Walk. It also communicates by the Edinburgh & Leith railroad. The town is situated on low ground adjoining the Firth, & consists of one old narrow street in the centre, with numerous lanes on each side, & some newer & more spacious streets, forming the continuation of Leith Walk on the E., to which adjoin the links or meadows. Chief buildings, the royal exchange, town-hall, custom house, several banks, jail, Trinity house or Mariners' hospital, & Seafield baths. Leith anciently consisted of two parishes; South Leith, originally Restalrig, & extending to, & comprehending part of the Calton of Edinburgh, with an ancient church, a high school, & endowed Bell's school; & North Leith, comprehending also a portion of the West Church parish of Edinburgh. Here there is a large modern church, there are besides two quoad sacra pas., St. John's and St Thomas. Leith fort, 1¼ m. W. of the custom house, is a commodious artillery station. The harbor has by successive erections been extended upwards of a mile into the Firth, & is still undergoing further extension & deepening, so as to range from 15 feet to 20 feet. There are two wet-docks, each 250 yards in length & 100 yards in breadth, with basin of 10 acres extent, capable of containing 150 vessels; also adjoining to these, three dry docks, each 136 feet long. Across the Water of Leith are two draw-bridges & a stone bridge. The number of vessels belonging to the port in 1850 was, 187 sail, & 23 steam; agg. tonnage, 23,280. There entered the port in 1850, 2,349 sailing (164,000 tons,) & 807 steam vessels (191,069 tons). Cleared from the port same year, 1,203 sailing (98,872 tons), & 800 steam vessels (190,687 tons). One half of the above consisted of coasting vessels. The chief commerce of Leith consists in its colonial & foreign trade & imports of grain. Its manufactures are unimportant, & consist chiefly of paint & color works, glass works (now declined), sugar refining, preserving meats, and iron foundries. Until 1832, when it was erected into a parl. burgh, Leith was dependent upon, & governed by the city of Edinburgh, to which it formed the port. In early times its prosperty, then considerable, was often checked by warlike conflicts; in 1541, the town was burnt by an English fleet; in 1549, it was taken possession of by the French troops, who came to the assistance of Mary of Guise. Cromwell repaired its fortifications. It is now governed by a provost, 4 bailies, & 10 councillors. Along with Portobello & Musselburgh, it sends one member to the House of Commons. LEON, city, & capital of the republic of Nicaragua, C. A., occupies the site of an Indian town called Subtiaba, on an extensive & fertile plain, nearly central between the waters of the Pacific, & Lake Leon or Managua. Lat. 12° 25′ N., 86° 57′ W. lon. It is built between two ravines; from the springs in each is furnished a copious supply of pure water. The city covers a large area, is built on a regular plan, with spacious streets & intervening squares. Pop. 37,000. The public edifices are considered among the best in Central America, include the extensive & massive cathedral, crowned by a lofty & central dome, & two flanking towers with pyramidal tops; it has been used as a fortress, 30 pieces of artillery being placed upon the roof, & the indentations on its walls made by the repeated bombardments which it has sustained, are visible in many places; the Episcopal palace, built of adobes & tiles, entered by a well-proportioned portico, & surrounded by fine gardens; the churches of La Merced, Recollection, & Calvario, remarkable for their size & fine facades, & various other churches. The Tridentine college of St. Ramon, once a flourishing establishment, with professorships of law & medicine, & numerous students, but now possessed only of a nominal existence; the government house, caortel general, or head barracks, & the hospital occupying the old convent of San Juan de Dios. The Indian village of Subtiaba, is properly part of Leon, though constituting a distinct municipality. It is all that remains of the larger town which Leon supplanted, & has a number of public buildings, among which its church, consisting of three naves supported by cedar columns with gilt capitals, surmounted by lofty and well-proportioned towers, is conspicuous. The houses, built of adobes, seldom exceed one story in height, but enclose a spacious court, planted with trees, & entered by a portal, which is often lofty, in the style of the Moresque arches common in Spain, & profusely & tastefully ornamented. The windows of the houses project 2 or 3 feet from the walls, are guarded by iron balconies, in which the inmates usually sit in the cool of the evening to receive & return the salutations of their passing acquaintances. In the disturbances and revolutions of which Nicaragua has so often been agitated, Leon has had its full share. Many of its houses have, in consequence, become dilapidated, & considerable portions of the city are mere heaps of ruins. On one occasion, above a thousand houses in the richest & best built quarter, were burned in a single night. The manufactures consist chiefly of dressed leather, & of cutlery, of which latter, more is done than is sufficient to supply the local wants. The markets are well-supplied, especially with fruits & vegetables in great profusion.

LEON, an old prov. & formerly a kingdom, in the N.W. of Spain, now divided into the provs. Leon, Salamanca, & Zamora.
